Republicans In Senate Swinging to Aid-Fund Bill

Gen. Marshall Tells Subcommittee Some Help May Be Sent To Latin America

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Aid to certain South American countries under the Lend-Lease Act was suggested yesterday as a Senate subcommittee rushed the $7,000,000,000 arms aid appropriation into final stages of enactment.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, told reporters he was "quite certain" South American countries, as well as Europe's beleaguered democracies, would be eligible for aid.

Waning Senate opposition to the House-approved appropriation, meanwhile, led Majority Leader Barkley to predict the measure may gain Senate approval on Monday, after a single day of debate.

As in the House, a Republican swing to the measure was apparent through the day. Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who fought lend-lease authority, were reported ready to support the outlay on final passage.

Would Offset the Axis

United States efforts to help Latin America acquire essential defense materials were discussed by Gen. Marshall at a press conference before the Army chief of staff testified at Senate hearings.

Hearings on the $7,000,000,000 were in executive session, but Senate committeemen are understood to have been told by various witnesses of increased Axis activity in the nations to the south. Nazi interest in South American air lines and airfields, as well as propaganda activities, were said to be on the increase.

Swift passage of the $7,000,000,000 "all-out" aid fund would not only be of vast pschological and material aid to Britain, Greece and China, but could supply the same offset to Axis activity in the southern half of this hemisphere, the subcommittee was informed.

Urging approval of the measure unchanged were Marshall, Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox and Budget Director Harold D. Smith.

Earlier, Gen. Marshall told reporters "we are doing everything we can" to promote South Ameri-

Arbitration Pact To End N. Y. Bus Strike Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

New York, March 20.—New York's striking bus drivers agreed tonight to submit their demands to arbitration and will resume operations Saturday on two struck lines carrying 95 per cent of Manhattan's surface transportation. Garage workers will return to work tomorrow.

Both the Transport Workers Union (C. I. O.), whose 3,500 members on two lines struck 11 days ago, and representatives of the two tied-up companies agreed to arbitrate the sole remaining issue—a wage scale for the Fifth Avenue Coach Co. employes. The other company involved is the New York City Omnibus Corporation.

What Is Public's Stand On Labor?

Are Americans satisfied with defense progress? With labor's role in defense? With the strike situation? The weight of public opinion may either spur or slacken the pace. It's important to know what the public thinks. A series of five Gallup Poll reports, starting Sunday in The Post, will reveal the public's attitude. Follow the entire series.

War Dept. Clerk Disappears

Army Intelligence Agents Join Police Hunt for Missing Girl

RUTH EGOSCUE

Army intelligence agents and city police last night were seeking Ruth Egoscue, 22-year-old War Department clerk, who disappeared after leaving her rooming house for work, Wednesday.

Her superiors in the Air Corps section in which she worked, told detectives she failed to arrive at her desk at the usual time and that she was not seen yesterday.

Mrs. James Beal, Miss Egoscue's landlady at 1706 Nineteenth Street Northwest, reported the disappearance yesterday. She said she particularly was alarmed by the fact the young woman was a stranger in the city and had only few acquaintances here.

Miss Egoscue came to Washington from her home in Forest Grove, Oreg., Saturday to accept an appointment as a typist with the War Department. She began working Monday, Mrs. Beal stated. The landlady also said the young woman had mentioned that she was not too fond of the work she was doing, that she was working with maps, rather than as a typist and that she

U. S. Building 5 Battleships Of 65,000 Tons

Maas Reveals Move; Senate Votes Navy $3,446,990,644

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Congressional circles disclosed yesterday that the Navy's next five battleships will be "super-dreadnaughts" of 65,000 tons, the largest in the world, as a record-breaking $3,446,990,644 naval appropriation bill was passed by the Senate.

Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, ranking minority member of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said he had been informed that five of the seven battleships ordered last September would have a listed "treaty" tonnage of 58,000 tons. Vessels of this listed tonnage would actually displace approximately 65,000 tons when fully armed and armored, he added.

Maas, who as a colonel of Marine Corps Reserve is in close touch with naval affairs, said it was logical to assume that the new "super-ships" would be named the Montana, Ohio, Maine, New Hampshire and Louisiana, as they are the names assigned to the next five battleships to be built.

Navy Noncommittal

Contracts for seven battleships were placed last September 9 under the two-ocean navy program, but their size was not disclosed. The Navy Department yesterday refused to comment on the disclosure.

Meanwhile, Secretary Knox placed orders for 239 sub chasers, minesweepers and other small warships—craft of the type he has said

U. S. Starts Vast Funds Raising Move

Defense Bonds Sale Part of Biggest Drive Since World War

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The biggest money-raising program since the World War, calling for sale of Government securities at from 10 cents to $10,000 to school children and bankers, millionaires and the man in the street, was launched yesterday by the United States Treasury.

Secretary Morgenthau announced that the three new types of national-defense bonds and savings stamps will go on sale May 1.

A task of raising about $15,000,000,000 in the next 15 months to pay for aid to Britain and American defense confronts Treasury officials and they hoped yesterday that the new defense bonds and savings stamps would bring in $3,000,000,000 to $4,500,000,000 of this sum. The rest would be financed by regular subscription sales of the usual Treasury securities.

This way of finding billions of dollars for the Government "will give all American citizens a sense of taking a direct part in the defense of the country," Secretary Morgenthau said.

The three types of new defense bonds, replacing the familiar "baby bonds," of which more than $5,000,000,000 have been sold, will be taxable by the Federal Government, will not be negotiable and will not be transferable.

The new bonds will be:

President Boards Navy Yacht, Its Guns Manned for Action

By Frank L. Kluckhohn

Port Everglades, Fla., March 20.—President Roosevelt arrived at this semitropical port at 6:30 p. m. and went aboard the yacht Potomac at once. Sailing was delayed, however, because of a wind and heavy seas outside the harbor, and it appeared unlikely that the vessel and her escort, the destroyer Benson, would sail before 6 or 7 a. m. tomorrow.

The Potomac is carrying the wartime equipment installed on all Naval vessels, including antiaircraft machine guns, while the Benson has its guns manned and depth-bombs and torpedoes ready for any emergency. Mr. Roosevelt, however, hopes to spend the next week or ten days in waters well south of those where the Battle of the Atlantic is being waged and, apparently, reasonably close to shore.

The British government has already informed the United States Government of a report that a Nazi submarine is on its way to raid off this continent, and the Chief Executive may have taken this into account.

Three cars of the Presidential train were to be held constantly in Miami for any emergency.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed to the gravity of the world situation by ordering that the yacht should at no time be more than eight hours run

Ford to Talk With Union, Detroit Hears

Sudden Reversal Of Labor Policy May Be Announced By Company Today

Special Dispatch to The Post

Detroit, March 20.—Henry Ford is about to sit down with the C. I. O. auto workers union in negotiations looking toward a collective bargaining contract, according to persistent reports circulated here today.

Such a step would mark a reversal of the long-standing Ford policy of refusing to enter into contracts with unions.

Although no later than 12 days ago, from his winter home in Ways, Ga., the pioneer motor manufacturer indicated his determination to continue to refuse recognition, it was believed that the company has suddenly changed its position. The quick shift is possible, it was pointed out, owing to the one-man control and consequent lack of necessity for extensive consultation prior to such a far-reaching reversal.

Believed Forced By OPM

A factor in the change of policy, it was believed, is the determined attitude of the Office of Production Management in Washington, manifest by its refusal on January 30 to award Ford a contract for Army trucks despite the fact that he was low bidder. The refusal, indicating that the company would be denied further participation in the defense program, was based on Ford's failure to agree to the labor policy clauses of the contract demanded by the Government.

If the reports are confirmed that Ford will negotiate with the C. I. O., chances of averting a threatened strike will be greatly enhanced, it was indicated. The C. I. O.-U. A. W. has already served notice of intent to shut down the Ford plants in the Dearborn area employing 95,000 men unless the company consents to negotiation of a contract.

Reports of the change of policy were the more surprising not only because Ford has fought the C. I. O. union steadily since 1937 and consistently battled National Labor Relations Board orders, but because his personnel chief, Harry A. Bennett, on March 4 refused even to acknowledge the existence of a valid dispute.

Called "a Big Spider Web"

At that time, following demands by the U. A. W. for the beginning of contract negotiations, wage increases and other changes in working conditions, Bennett wrote Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner of Michigan that there was "no dispute to discuss and no legitimate reason for Ford workers to strike."

Ford termed the union "a big spider's web" in his recent statement from Ways and said "there is no place for a union in a picture like this."

Announcement of the company's willingness to meet with the union may be made tomorrow by United States Conciliator James F. Dewey, it was rumored. Dewey has been conferring with Ford officials for several weeks in an attempt to arrive at a basis for mediation.

Yugoslav Council Approves Axis Pact; Fleeing Italians Report Wild Rout in Albania

R. A. F. to Rescue—Eden's Plane Safe

Budapest, March 20 (DNB).—British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden narrowly escaped becoming involved in an aerial battle between British and Italian warplanes while flying from Egypt to the Mediterranean island of Cyprus, a dispatch from Istanbul stated tonight.

Eden was en route to his recent conference with Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu when the incident occurred, according to the dispatch.

The pilot of Eden's plane spotted the Italian planes just in time to dive out of their path, it was asserted. A moment later, British fighters — presumably escorting Eden's plane—dived to the attack on the Fascists, permitting Eden to escape.

Dr. Fishbein Denies Plotting Against GHA

Editor of the A. M. A. Journal on Stand Only 54 Minutes

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

A confident smile illuminating his face, Dr. Morris Fishbein yesterday categorically denied Government charges of his implication in the alleged conspiracy to make life miserable for Group Health Association.

In contrast with other days, when attendance has been so great the trial room in District Court was filled with doctors, nurses and just plain laymen, attracted by the prospect of hearing America's best known man of medicine from the witness stand, defending himself against a criminal accusation.

The audience was both pleased and dismayed. Pleased because they were rewarded with a sample of the famous Fishbein tongue; dismayed because the day's headline performance was so brief.

Where none of the four defendants who preceded him on the stand finished his testimony in a single day, Dr. Fishbein was out of the chair 54 minutes after taking the witness' oath. Cross-examination was limited to a single innocuous question.

Fluent in Testimony

Under direct questioning by William E. Leahy, chief of counsel defending organized medicine in the antitrust case, Dr. Fishbein testified that he heard the first "vague rumblings" about Group Health Association "very early in 1937." (The Federal workers' health cooperative was opened that November.)

Fluent and unequivocal in his testimony, unlike several of the earlier witnesses, the editor of the A. M. A. Journal went on:

"Of course, heard of the antecedents of G. H. A. as far back as 12 years ago, from Mr. Filene."

Argentine Beef Denied to Navy Because Wallace Is Eating Duck

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A proposed "good neighbor" purchase of Argentine beef for the United States Navy suffered a setback yesterday because Vice President Wallace, the Nation's chief promoter of better relations among the Americas, was busy eating duck.

The Senate had up for consideration the hotly-debated proposal to knock out of the Navy appropriation bill a provision forbidding purchase of foreign beef. Spokesmen for the Midwest were leading a valiant fight to give only American beef to American boys.

WALLACE

While all this was going on, the Vice President was entertaining ten guests in the Republican dining room.

His luncheon was in progress when the vote was taken—and it turned out to be 32 to 32, with the Vice President absent and not exercising his constitutional prerogative of casting a ballot to break a tie. Consequently, the proposal was lost, and the prohibition on Argentine beef remains in the bill.

But—as if the world weren't complicated enough—the clerk apparently forgot to count one vote for the amendment, which was cast by Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia. If this inadvertent error had not been made, the Vice President's vote would not have been re-

British Sink Four Fascist Warships Including Cruiser And Transport

By Joseph S. Evans, jr.
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

London, March 20.—An Italian transport and two Italian supply ships have been sunk, a third supply ship "almost certainly destroyed" and a second transport badly damaged and probably sent to the bottom by British submarines, the admiralty announced today.

The two transports were crowded to the gunwales with troops, while all three supply vessels were "heavily laden."

A few hours later a naval communique from Cairo announced that a series of "extremely successful attacks" against Italian shipping in Valona and Durazzo have been carried out by the fleet air arm on the nights of March 15 to 17.

Severe damage was said to have been caused when British torpedo carrying planes swooped down on the crowded shipping in the main Italian bases in Albania. Six or seven hits by torpedoes were reported and ships sunk included a cruiser or large destroyer.

No Details Given

The meager admiralty announcement gave no details of the date or location of the attacks on the Italian convoy. It said only that the "further successes reported by our submarines" have been directed against Il Duce's sea communications with the Italian army overseas.

Informed circles here declared, however, that the "best probability" was that the action had taken place in the Adriatic against reinforcements being transported to Italy's hard pressed Albanian forces.

In the first action the submarine Utmost spotted an escorted convoy and successfully launched its torpedoes at two "deeply laden" Italian transports, one of about 6,000 tons, the other about 4,000 tons, which were seen to be crowded with troops. The torpedoes found their targets and a "very violent explosion" followed.

"It is considered certain that at least one of the transports was destroyed," the admiralty said, the Utmost reported on February 24 that she had torpedoed an 8,000-ton supply ship which was seen later sinking and deserted by her convoy escort.

Supply Ship Torpedoed

In the second attack the Unique torpedoed a "fully laden" Italian supply ship of about 3,000 tons, which was also proceeding under armed escort. This vessel was "almost certainly sunk" according to the communique.

The Triumph attacked two well-filled supply ships of about 2,500 tons each, and sent them to the bottom. It was the Triumph, which last year returned to port from a "particularly dangerous mission" with half her bow blown off after striking a mine.

The Triumph, a submarine of the Triton class, has a displacement of 1,090 tons, and was launched in 1938 within three months of the ill-fated Thetis, which foundered on trials but was salvaged and is now called the Thunderbolt.

The Unique and Utmost are two of Britain's newest underseas craft and no details concerning them have been made public.

Plymouth Left In Ruins, Death Toll Is High

British City Suffers Worst Air Raid In Its History

By the United Press

A Southwest Coastal Town, England (Friday), March 21—Central portions of this coast town (Plymouth) were reduced to smoking, crumbling ruins last night and early today when hundreds of Nazi planes heaped an estimated 20,000 incendiaries and hundreds of big bombs upon it in all-out "blitz" fury.

Many were killed and injured and hundreds of men, women and children were homeless early today after the hours-long assault marking the opening of Adolf Hitler's "spring offensive."

It was the worst air raid terror the town had ever experienced, although it has been bombed many times since the start of the war.

The low-flying raiders, sweeping upon the town in constant relays, left homes, offices, churches, shops and motion picture theaters ruined heaps.

Toll Mounts Hourly

The toll of dead and injured mounted hour by hour as dawn approached and rescue squads dug in the ruins.

Hundreds of stunned and bewildered homeless persons stumbled over broken bricks, mortar, wood and glass clogging the streets.

The homeless passed silently by rescue squads digging in tumbled heaps of masonry for their trapped neighbors.

Some of the homeless wanderers, being cared for as quickly as emergency services could provide for them, wore blood-stained bandages. The clothing of many had been ripped by the blasts that destroyed their homes.

The raiders smashed upon the city constantly from dusk last night until after midnight, defying a thunderous barrage of antiaircraft fire.

A three-story hotel was demolished (presumably the Royal in the center of Plymouth), a department store was wrecked as well as at

Staggering Protests

Deprived of Golf, Some Wail; Others Moan Loss of 40 Winks

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

A couple of issues, apparently vital to a lot of Federal workers, have injected a controversial note into office and street-corner discussions of the new stagger-hour working schedule. They involve:

Those extra "forty winks" in the morning.

Those golf and tennis games in the afternoon.

Although it is pretty widely agreed that the schedule effective March 31, will achieve its purpose and relieve rush-hour traffic congestion, there is considerable feeling against loss of "summer hours" on one hand and enforced early rising on the other.

In fact, the feeling is so strong over loss of "hot weather" schedules at the Social Security Board that a protest petition to the Budget Bureau is planned. A poll taken yesterday by interested workers in the tabulation section showed that 73 out of 82 employes are opposed to any change.

There are approximately 4,000 employes in the SSB office and an unofficial estimate reported by workers yesterday indicated that some 90 per cent look with distavor upon the new 9:15 a. m. to 4:45 p. m. year-around schedule.

During summer months last year the board operated from 8:30 a. m. to 4 p. m., and the year before from

Three in Belgrade Cabinet Protest, Predict Disorders If Treaty Is Signed

By the Associated Press

Belgrade (Friday), March 21. Violent objections by cabinet members who predicted serious internal disorder were reliably reported early today to have arisen from the Yugoslav Crown Council's approval of a program described as a passive but effective alliance with the Axis.

The cabinet and military chiefs were asked to initial the scheme without discussion, but three ministers were asserted to have raised vigorous objections.

Their resignations were considered likely.

Such an alliance would clear the way for Germany to attack Greece as soon as signatures are affixed in Vienna or Berlin possibly next week.

German diplomatists said reports of big British troop landings in Salonika, if true, might also spur Germany to swift action.

Fleeing Italian and Albanian soldiers brought stories out of the war zone today that the Fascist divisions are fast disintegrating after the failure of the March offensive which Benito Mussolini is reputed to have directed on the ground; that some units were in wild and headlong flight toward the Adriatic coast.

"There is little discipline left," they added.

Flee Into Yugoslavia

The soldiers were among groups which fled across the border into Yugoslavia and laid down their arms. Simultaneously there were reports from the Albanian frontier that Tepeleni, central Albanian town defended by the Fascists since mid-December, finally had fallen to the Greeks.

This last story was related by travelers arriving from the Greek town of Phlorina. There was no confirmation from any other quarter here or in Athens.

Political quarters here pointed out that the regent, Prince Paul, then would be free to find a cabinet which would approve a German alliance, but they agreed that such action might well bring to a blaze the smoldering passions in this pro-British country.

Such a reaction was predicted particularly among the peasant population.

The three objecting cabinet ministers were Dr. Srdjan Budisavljevic, minister of social welfare; Dr. Branko Cubrilovic, minister of agriculture and leader of the Serb Peasant Party, and Prof. Mihajlo Konstantinovic, minister of justice.

Hemmed in by Axis

Istanbul Sees Anglo-Turkish Offensive

By the United Press

Istanbul, March 20.—Reports circulating in diplomatic quarters today said that plans for a possible "surprise offensive" against Germany's army in Bulgaria by Great Britain, Turkey and Greece were discussed at yesterday's Anglo-Turkish conference at Cyprus.

Confirmation of the reports that the groundwork for such an offensive was laid by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu was lacking in official quarters.

Saracoglu arrived back in Ankara by plane at noon today from Cyprus, accompanied by British Ambassador Sir Hugh Knatchbull-Hugessen, who participated in the conference, said in an official communique to have "reemphasized that complete identity of views exists between the two governments."

Diplomatic circles heard reports that Eden, on whose initiative the meeting occurred, laid before Saracoglu proposals for cooperative "preventive action" by Britain, Greece and Turkey and one version was that the participation of Yugoslavia in the drive was envisaged as at least a possibility.

It was pointed out that if, as reported, Yugoslavia is about to sign an agreement with Germany granting some concessions to Nazi demands but excluding passage of German troops, the way is not completely barred to some form of Yugoslav cooperation in the Anglo-Greek-Turkish bloc.

Neutral diplomatic quarters believed that Premier Dr. Refik Saydam or Saracoglu would make a speech in the next few days indicating the Turkish course.

Political opinion here held that Russia, motivated primarily by a desire to keep out of the war but at the same time anxious lest Germany reach the Dardanelles, would maintain an attitude of benevolent neutrality toward Turkey even if the Turks received direct aid from Britain.

Italians Reported Routed in Albania

"Because of Yugoslavia's delicate foreign situation, it is necessary that her position of strict neutrality should be modified in some way so that she should become more closely connected with the Axis. Because she is surrounded on all sides by Axis troops, it is necessary for Yugoslavia to form a new foreign policy in order to maintain her independence and prevent her from being involved in war.

"Therefore an agreement is being made with the Axis providing for more intimate relations."

These relations, as described by a responsible government leader, would involve an offer of economic and semimilitary aid to Germany and the Axis, but another version said the program called for full Axis membership in everything except that Yugoslavia would not furnish active military aid to the Axis and troops would not cross Yugoslavia to get at the Greeks.

Greek quarters, stunned by the swift decision of the Yugoslav crown council after weeks of obscure bargaining, said the government solemnly assured Greece only a few days ago that nothing would occur.

The German prediction of an early thrust against Greece was evoked by reports from Djevdjelija, Yugoslavia, town on the Greek frontier, that great numbers of British troops arrived yesterday at Saloniks.

British Pound Cologne, Ports And Airports

By the Associated Press

London, March 20.—R. A. F. bombers struck at the Germans with fiery overnight raids on Cologne, the Nazi U-boat base at Lorient, France, and airdromes in Belgium and the Netherlands, the air ministry announced today, even while London was undergoing its heaviest aerial assault of 1941 last night and early today.

Factories and oil tanks strung out along the east bank of the Rhine were set ablaze, the ministry declared, munitions stores were blown sky high and communications were crippled in this latest attack on much-bombed Cologne.

Participating pilot ssaid their "short but very sharp" attack within a single hour, between 9 and 10 p. m., caused as much destruction as any of the previous longer raids.

"Great factories were ablaze from end to end," was the way one pilot put it.

"Bombs planted beside a railroad junction and near the Hohenzollern Bridge spanning the Rhine started "two long fires which ran across a wide area of industrial quarters and continued to blaze furiously," said another.

Columns of black smoke were reported to have billowed up from an oil plant.

Coastal command planes smashed at docks at Lorient, where one huge fire was reported to have been set off.

Still other R. A. F. units raided airdromes in the Low Countries, where German aircraft were taking off, and at a Dutch base shattering explosions were said to have been followed by countless smaller ones.

Sydney Cheers U. S. Sailors as 'Our Comrades'

By Roy L. Curthoys.
Copyright by New York Times

Sydney, Australia, March 20.—Sydney gave a breath-taking welcome to the American naval squadron under Rear Admiral John Henry Newton, which arrived here today. An immense host poured into the city this afternoon to honor the 300 American sailors on parade.

So dense were the crowds that thousands did not see the marchers; but they cheered nonetheless. Amid a blizzard of streamers and flood of petals, confetti and torn paper the men, accompanied by detachments of Australians, stepped through a ravine of color that rocked to the thunder of cheers.

The governor general, Lord Gowrie, took the salute at the Town Hall.

"We're mighty glad to see you," Acting Prime Minister A. W. Fadden told the men at a Town Hall luncheon. "Any time you're passing this way again, just drop in on us. No recent happening has so thrilled us as this timely visit of yours. We are confident America is doing everything possible to aid us in making safe the things we love and cherish. You are our comrades and you have given us the hand of friendship in our time of trial."

Minister of the Navy W. M. Hughes assured the men they could not come to Australia too often. "We see in America," he said, "an Australia magnified and glorified. What America was we are today."

Rear Admiral Newton, acknowledging the welcome, said: "We like you Australians. We liked you in the last war when we fought with you for the same democracy for which you are fighting now. You think like Americans, you act like Americans, and, what's more, you fight like Americans. Your hospitality has become a tradition in the American fleet. The memory of today will remain with us always."

Interviewed on his flagship, Admiral Newton said the visit was a complete surprise to the squadron, which left Pearl Harbor under sealed orders to find they called for dividing a visit between Australia and New Zealand. He regretted the squadron was unable to accept an invitation to go to Melbourne.

The welcome to the ships when they arrived early this morning was no less enthusiastic. Huge crowds lined the harbor and crowded every available harbor craft as the ships majestically steamed to their anchorages.

The U. S. S. Chicago fired a 21-gun salute entering the harbor, to which the forts replied.

Duce's Cousin Is Captured By Greeks

By the Associated Press

Athens (Friday), March 21.—The capture of a cousin of Premier Mussolini and the repulse of two strong Italian attacks supported by tanks were reported early today by the official government spokesman.

The spokesman also said there was no confirmation of foreign reports that the Greeks had captured Tepeleni, Albanian town which the Greeks have besieged since early January.

"Among the many Italian officers captured during the recent operations was a cousin of Premier Mussolini, Lieut. Col. Tuveri Ciglio, commanding officer of the Fifty-third Battalion of the Twenty-sixth Legion of Blackshirts," the spokesman declared.

The official spokesman in his account of yesterday's fighting reported that a company 150 strong was thrown against Greek fire and was quickly blasted. Another company was destroyed Wednesday.

"About 100 dead were found in front of our lines. The rest were wounded," he declared.

The first tank-supported attack was made early yesterday, the spoesman said. The tanks were hit and forced back.

The spokesman added:

"Later the Italians launched a second attack against the same position (undisclosed in the reports) over a 5-kilometer (about 3 miles) front, supported by tanks. It was broken up, the enemy leaving about 100 dead and wounded and much material. Three tanks were destroyed. . . .

"As a result of offensive action the Greeks improved their position and took 40 prisoners."

British Close In On Cheren, Bomb Asmara

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 20.—British soldiers besieging the important Eritrean city of Cheren, moved closer to that Fascist citadel in the face of "heavy enemy counterattacks" and with the help of R. A. F. dive-bombers, the British reported tonight.

A communique said Italian casualties in bitter action yesterday were "particularly heavy."

In Ethiopia, the British continued their advance "satisfactorily." The communique added:

"Enemy positions in the hills around Cheren were repeatedly dive-bombed and machine-gunned by our aircraft and enemy motor transport on the road between Cheren and Asmara was also attacked."

The R. A. F. also attacked Asmara, capital of Eritrea, dropping bombs on the telegraph office, the Fiat Works and the railway stations there, the British said.

Other raiders attacked "enemy" airdromes in Tripolitania and bombers struck at shipping in Tripoli Harbor.

"Explosions and several large fires were caused in the harbor and near the military stores," the communique said.

(In London, the ministry of information said the British army of the Nile established a "world's record for speed in action" and had killed or captured the "whole army of 150,000 men" which the Italians assembled in North Africa for the invasion of Egypt.)

Nazis Claim 'Worst Raid' On London

By the United Press

Berlin, (Friday), March 21.—Wave after wave of German bombers guided to their targets by the blazing shambles of "the greatest air raid of all time," early today were reported to be heaping destruction on London in a repetition of Wednesday night's all-out assault.

The Luftwaffe's gigantic offensive, informed German quarters boasted, marks "the real beginning of the spring war offensive," with its chief goal "complete starvation of the British Isles."

Luftwaffe pilots were said by theofficial D.N.B. agency to have reported early today that widespread fires set in Wednesday night's attacks still were visible over London, "thus offering the Luftwaffe orientation for the new attacks," carried out in good weather.

Bombs of all caliber and many incendiaries fell on London, it was said, and the first German bombing crew reported "objectives burning" with other large fires observed nearby.

Meanwhile the Germans claimed the destruction of 66,500 additional tons of British shipping and severe damage to 31,000 more. DNB said a U-boat reported sinking 59,500 tons—including a 21,000-ton ship—and damage to 21,000 tons in a single British convoy. The high command said Nazi planes sank a 7,000-ton ship and damaged two others totaling 10,000 tons.

Herman Kidd, a German propaganda reporter, who accompanied the Luftwaffe in Wednesday's raids on London, wrote:

"Between hundreds of large-scale fires were scattered thousands of smaller blazes. At one point there was a gigantic conflagration whose extent could hardly be estimated. . . . The most horrible thing was the burning city (financial district). In the city of London and the boroughs there glittered fire after fire, conflagration after conflagration, whirling smoke, gas and flames from where fires spread, in all directions over the city. . . .

"Black points began to appear in the fiery smoke—hundreds of barrage balloons scattered over the whole city. We had never seen such a gigantic number of these treacherous balloons which, however, were unable to harm us and mostly burst and crashed into the city as a result of the murderous heat."

The high command communique said a few British planes flew into western Germany Wednesday night and slightly damaged residential districts. Four British planes were reported shot down with no German losses.

least three churches and four "pubs." A motion picture theater was damaged badly by the bombs.

The raiders also bombed eight London districts where workers still dug in debris of the year's worst air attack Wednesday night and early Thursday. Only minor casualties and damage were reported last night, however.

Eastern and southern counties, as well as South Wales also were bombed.

A heavy toll of civilian lives was taken by the Nazi bombers that flew over London in waves for many hours Wednesday night. The death list grew during the day as more broken bodies were dug from the ruins of homes, apartment houses, hotels, tenements and at least five air raid shelters.

Rescuers worked with a big power crane at the remains of a public shelter, seeking to recover an unknown number of bodies buried by a direct hit. About 60 persons were brought out injured, while some miraculously escaped unhurt.

The bomb struck just as the people inside were going to bed. Half the building was torn away.

Roosevelt Leaves On Fishing Cruise

from an American port. He also pointed to the gravity of taking time off on the way South for a cruise for a bit of sunshine and fishing to inspect carefully the Navy's huge new Jacksonville Air Training Station. The President expressed amazement and gratification at the progress that has been made since the start, 16 months ago, on the huge project for training fighting pilots and ground crews to man Navy planes.

The President spent an hour and nine minutes inspecting the new 3,260-acre, $40,000,000 air base which will turn out 200 pilots and 600 mechanics monthly when in full operation.

At different centers of the partially complete establishment, Mr. Roosevelt reviewed blue-clad officers and enlisted men, including the present contingent of khaki-clad flying cadets numbering 514, of whom 103 already are soloing, and the long files of trade-school students, most of them youngsters of about 18 years of age who had arrived within the past week or two.

Seated in the back seat of an open car with Capt. Charles P. Mason, commanding officer of the post, he viewed the huge and elaborate hangars and shops, some completed and other nearing completion, and the criss-crossing 6,000-foot runways upon anyone of which a squadron of planes can land abreast. There were also lines of training planes, nicknamed "Yellow Perils," drawn up on the field, and he could see the gray wooden barracks as well as the tidy officers' homes along the St. John's River.

The President declared that progress upon the project was "perfectly fine."

Capt. Mason informed the President that a flying field begun last August was turned over for Navy use in December, seven weeks ahead of schedule, and that construction in general is running two to three weeks ahead of schedule.

Work on all contracts let would be completed by June 1, he said.

When in full operation there will be 3,500 enlisted men on duty at the station, 1,400 to 1,600 cadets, 3,000 trade school students and 480 officer-instructors. The cadets will obtain a seven months flying course and the mechanics four to five months of specialized training. The President commented that this meant 7,000 to 8,000 trade school graduates annually.

At present, officers explained, contracts let for the air station total $25,000,000, of which $16,000,000 already has been paid out.

Among the officers whom the President personally greeted at the post were the Rev. Maurice S. Sheehy, who recently left Catholic University to become a naval chaplain after issuing a statement that Hitlerism must be defeated and that every American ought to do his part.

Japan Reported Planning to Send Army to Thailand

Saigon, French Indo-China, March 20 (AP).—Rumors spread today that the Japanese are planning to send 100,000 troops from Hainan Island across middle Indo-China into Thailand (Siam), and concern accordingly arose as to the prospect of continued peace in this region.

This story found no official confirmation, but it was accepted by a good many observers as plausible. It was suggested that the Thai government might well allow the movement to pay off Japan for the recent Tokyo-dictated border settlement with Indo-China which gave Thailand important territorial gains.

Mediation Unit Meeting Called For Tuesday

By Alfred Friendly

Post Staff Writer

The National Defense Mediation Board, created Wednesday by President Roosevelt, will hold its first meeting Tuesday on the return to Washington of its chairman, Clarence A. Dykstra, it was indicated yesterday.

Although the new 11-man body must necessarily take preliminary organizational steps and formulate procedural and policy determinations before it can consider specific disputes, defense circles pointed out that these steps need not be unduly time-consuming, particularly since the board probably will rely for its initial working staff on members of the United States Conciliation Service and OPM staffs.

The latter organization, it is known, is particularly anxious for the board to begin consideration at the earliest possible moment of current defense strikes which have been stubbornly resistant to other mediation efforts. In addition, OPM officers are said to feel it vitally important that the board be in functioning order before April 1, against possible crucial disputes in the coal and steel industries likely to come to a head at that time.

New Setup Wins Confidence

Confidence in the efficacy of the board, despite its lack of mandatory authority to halt strikes, was expressed yesterday in labor and defense circles.

Officials pointed out that the power of the board to publish recommendations and to issue findings of fact was a major weapon denied to the Conciliation Service and unusable by OPM because of its lack of time and facilities to make the necessary prior investigation. The threat of public findings, it was said, will probably be sufficient in many cases to force recalcitrant parties to the disputes to retreat from untenable positions that may be delaying settlements.

A second weapon of the board, which may receive its first test if the International Harvester Co. case is still unsettled by the time the new body is ready to handle individual disputes, is the power to request Labor Board determination of appropriate bargaining agencies.

Dykstra's Return Awaited

In the I. H. C. dispute, which revolves about this issue, there has been resistance to a Labor Board election. Such a determination might in itself settle the case, or its imminence might result in willingness to compromise demands, it was asserted.

Pending the return of Dr. Dykstra, news of whose appointment reached him while on a trip to California, selections of other employes and officers of the board were held in abeyance. Arrangements were begun, however, to prepare office facilities, probably in the new Social Security Board Building, adjacent to OPM offices.

Meantime, the Conciliation Service took steps yesterday to coordinate its work with the new agency. Its director, John R. Steelman, called the service's 110 conciliators to assemble in regional meetings next weekend at New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Birmingham to discuss pending disputes and arrange for cooperation with the board.

D. C. Beauty to Add Her Charm To Cherry Blossom Festival

ARMY GIRL GETS TITLE—Winsome Nancy Alden Strong, 17-year-old debutante daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. A. G. Strong, is Queen of the 1941 Cherry Blossom Festival. Hazel-eyed Nancy, 5 feet 9 inches tall and 123 pounds, has all the requisites of a beauty queen. She was officially informed of her selection yesterday in Commissioner Hazen's office

As pretty as the blooms themselves, Miss Nancy Alden Strong, a debutante of the past season, yesterday was named queen of the Cherry Blossom Festival.

Seventeen and brunette, Queen Nancy is the daughter of Lieut. Col. Alden G. Strong, U. S. A., and Mrs. Strong, of 2301 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Present plans are to hold a two-day celebration, April 5 and 6, coinciding with the Army Day festivities. The Army Day parade would be routed by the Tidal Basin and shortly thereafter Queen Nancy would receive her official crown from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

This year's queen served in the court of honor of the queen of the President's Cup Regatta last fall.

Miss Strong was educated at the May School in Boston, at Holton-Arms School here, and now is a student at the Stuart School, where she is studying costume designing. She likes dancing, dramatics and the Russian Ballet and excells in tennis, swimming, diving and fashion modeling. The queen admits she can cook and also sew a fine seam.

New Dealers Warn Labor To Compromise

By Hedley Donovan

Post Staff Writer

Congressional New Dealers yesterday appealed to labor, in its own interest, to make sacrifices for peace in defense industries or face the threat of drastic antiunion legislation.

House comment on President Roosevelt's appointment of a defense mediation board revealed frank concern in liberal circles at the possibility of legislation seriously damaging labor's interests and hope that the new mediation body will be able to avert the threat.

Representative Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House Labor Committee, said that "in most of these disputes management is at fault as often as labor" but added that "the public as a whole blames labor."

"In the present mood of the House and the country," she continued, "labor must realize that much of its recent progress might be wiped out overnight."

Constructive Step

Mrs. Norton described the President's appointment of a mediation board as "a constructive step" and emphasized her hope that the board "can bring about a rapid enough improvement in the situation to prevent legislation which would be very dangerous at a time when so many people are hysterical."

Meanwhile, officials of the Office of Production Management said the War Department had given them more time, until today "at least," to settle the strike of A. F. L. construction workers at Wright Field, Ohio. The War Department is known to be considering taking over the work itself, unless a settlement is reached quickly. A $6,000,000 Air Corps expansion program is being held up by the strike, occasioned by employment of several C. I. O. members on one electrical installation project.

The OPM yesterday dispatched Thomas F. Burns, labor consultant, to Los Angeles to attempt settlement of a strike at the Harvill Aircraft Die Casting Corporation. He is expected to confer today with representatives of the C. I. O. Diecasters Union, the company management, and the United States Conciliation Service.

Negotiators reported little progress in their attempts to settle two other strikes vitally affecting the defense program—at the Edgewater, N. J., plant of the Alumnium Company of America, and at the Bridgeville, Pa., plant of the Universal-Cyclops Steel Corporation.

In the House, Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, recalling that he had fought on the House floor for the Wagner and wage-hour acts and against amendment of the Wagner act, said the public is "incensed" by strikes in defense industries.

Says Strikes Must Cease

"Congress will carry out the mandate of the American people," he said, "and that is to bring in corrective legislation if these strikes don't cease."

Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, expressed praise for the "fine personnel" of the new mediation agency, but said he could not see how "this board has any power to change the situation."

Sumners said he expects "some very interesting testimony" next week before the Judiciary Committee, which has been conducting hearings on strikes in defense industries for the past month.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, author of the open shop amendment which the House rejected Wednesday, said appointment of the Mediation Board "doesn't change in the slightest the need for legislation."

Equally emphatic comment came from Representatives Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, Dies Committee member, who called the President's move "ineffective."

Army Develops Traveling Laundry

By the Associated Press

The Army's Quartermaster Corps is developing a portable laundry unit capable of caring for the weekly requirements of about 1,500 soldiers.

Announcing this yesterday, the War Department said the unit would be mounted on a four-wheel semi-trailer which will be able to operate partly while in motion. Models are to be sent to Camp Lee, Va., for tests before large scale manufacturer.

Aluminum Workers Assured Employment

The American Federation of Labor said yesterday it had assurances from Sidney Hillman, associate OPM director, that action would be taken within 48 hours to insure the uninterrupted employment of aluminum workers whose jobs may be affected by the enforcement of aluminum priorities for national defense.

Price Policies Suggested By Miss Elliott

Copyright by New York Times

The general price policies, which should be followed during the present emergency by both manufacturers and distributers of consumer goods, were outlined yesterday by Miss Harriet Elliott, consumer commissioner of the National Defense Advisory Commission, in a letter to B. J. Cahn, president of B. Kuppenheimer & Co., men's clothing manufacturers.

Miss Elliott's recommendations were that anticipated cost increases which have not yet materialized should not be made the basis for price advances; that when prices of new goods advance, inventories be averaged rather than marked up to the new level; and that rigid adherence to the practice of traditional rates of mark-up should be discouraged unless it can be shown that costs have advanced by an equivalent amount.

Miss Elliott strongly urged that these be adopted as fundamental policies in order to guard against spiral in living costs.

"Current pricing policies running contrary to these recommendations tend to boost prices more quickly and in greater amount than business costs rise," she said. "The net effect is a pyramiding of unwarranted price increases in consumer goods. The united action of American business men is necessary to avert these perils."

First Shipment Under Aid Bill Sunk, Nazis Claim

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 20.—A big newspaper banner line told Germans today of an Axis report that the first shipload of United States armaments to start for England since passage of the British-aid bill had been sunk.

The newspaper Nacht Ausgabe, crediting the report to Rome, commented:

"That which was expected by all clear-minded men has already happened. Herewith the American people finally understand the real meaning of the lease-lend law."

The report, as broadcast by the Rome radio, said it was rumored in Gibraltar that the British-aid cargo had gone down before Axis submarines. There were no details, and no explanation as to how the report was obtained from the British fortress of Gibraltar.

Pretty War Dept. Clerk Disappears

According to Mrs. Beal, Miss Egoscue went out Tuesday night with a "Navy man" whom she had met on the train coming to Washington. The man, she said, is a Washingtonian and that he was coming home on leave from his post in Chicago.

Ruth returned home early, her landlady said, complained of not feeling well and went to bed Wednesday morning, Mrs. Beal asserted, she took only fruit juice and coffee for breakfast and begged off walking to her office with other young women living at the rooming house. She was heard asking her roommate, Miss Doris Nolan, also a War Department employe, if she would share a cab to work with her.

This latter offer was declined by Miss Nolan and Miss Egoscue left the house alone between 8 and 8:15 a. m. No one noticed whether she took a taxicab or a bus.

War Department officials were interested in the case last night and supplied police with a photograph of the missing woman anda description of her Tuesday night's companion.

Described as "very pretty," the clerk typist has brown wavy hair and is 5 feet 6 inches tall. She weighs about 115 pounds, it was said.

When last seen she was neatly dressed in a tan jersey suit, blue shoes, tan hat and a reversible topcoat of blue gabardine and tan plaid. It is believed she had about $25 with her.

Detectives fruitlessly searched the missing woman's room for clews. Officers said they found Miss Egoscue's belongings apparently all intact. Her suitcases with all her clothing were there and some money was in a handbag. A diary was found but it contained only a few "hometown" names and addresses.

Police last night were investigating a tip that a girl fitting the description of Miss Egoscue had been seen wandering aimlessly in the vicinity of North Capitol and I Streets and left in a taxi at about 10:30 p. m.

U. S. Building 5 Battleships Of 65,000 Tons

will be the first naval aid to Great Britain under the lend-lease program.

Contracts totaling $100,315,682 for 180 wooden minesweepers, 19 steel minesweepers, 10 steel fleet tugs and 30 wooden subchasers were placed with funds appropriated in the Fourth Suppdemental Defense Act.

In approving the 1942 naval appropriation bill, the Senate upheld a proviso barring the Navy from buying Latin-American canned beef. It rejected, by a tie vote of 42 to 42, an amendment of its Appropriations Committee to lift a ban of several years standing preventing the purchase of any but domestic livestock and agriculture products.

The bill, carrying funds for maintenance of the Navy next year and speeding up construction of the two-ocean fleet, goes back to the House for action on minor amendments.

Earlier, the Senate completed Congressional action on a $345,000,000 naval shore development program, sending two authorization bills for additional bases in the mid-Pacific and Atlantic to the White House.

Members of Congress close to the Navy Department believe the new "super-battleships" will carry 16-inch guns, the caliber now carried by the largest ships. Some consideration, however, has been given to 18-inch guns.

Last year, some members of the House Naval Affairs and Naval Appropriations Committees urged that the new battleships be larged than the 45,000-ton craft then contemplated. Naval officials said the matter was under study and that 52,000-ton craft might be laid down.

Chairman Scrugham, of the House naval appropriations subcommittee, urging "bigger and better" dreadnaughts than any other power, declared it is a mistake to merely "match" ships of other navies.

While the Navy has kept silent as to the tonnage of its new craft, Rear Admiral Ben Moreell recently testified that new graving docks capable of handling 55,000-ton ships are being built.

One difficulty about building battleships larger than 45,000 tons has been that craft of this size can barely scrape through the existing locks of the Panama Canal. A new set of locks now under construction, however, are designed to handle much larger craft.

Tie Bars Alien Beef to Navy as Wallace Eats quired.

Senator Russcell later declared that he would "seek to have the question reconsidered on Monday in order that the tie vote may be broken." It was believed last night that the only way in which the subject could be reviewed would be by unanimous consent of the Senate and it was uncertain that this could be obtained.

The Vice President, a leading exponent of the "good neighbor" policy, emphatically asserted that he would have voted for the Argentine beef had he been present.

Rather embarrassed about his experienc- with his first tie vote, Wallace explained that when the voting-bell sounded, the six Senators who were enjoying his hospitality rushed upstairs to cast their ballots. But, feeling that he should remain with the other guests, Wallace asked Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, to let him know if the vote were close.

Senator Adams, an opponent of Argentine beef, soon returned somewhat crestfallen with the news that from the way the vote was running it looked like "the cause of justice" had been defeated, i. e., that the foreign beef would be allowed the Navy.

"Acted in Good Faith"

"I didn't go up because I thought there was no need for it," the Vice President ruefully observed, "but the Senator's judgment was apparently faulty. I want to make it clear, though, that I know he acted in good faith—he's one of the most honorable men in the world."

Veterans of the Senate recalled that another Vice President was missing on an important vote in 1925, when the nomination of Charles B. Warren as President Coolidge's Attorney General was under debate. The vote came when Vice President Dawes was taking a nap in a downtown hotel. As soon as he was notified, he rushed to the Senate chamber—but arrived too late. The vote already had been announced and the nomination failed to be confirmed.

In the course of the debate that preceded yesterday's vote, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, declared that Argentine canned beef is superior to the domestic variety, and to clinch the point, noted that "some Senators who are now downstairs at lunch, if they are eating corned beef, are eating Argentine beef, for there is no other kind used in the United States Senate restaurant."

Argentine beef, however, was not on the Vice President's menu; he had ordered duck, American.

Soviet Engineers Were Aboard Train Missing Wrecking

Pittsburgh, March 20 (AP).—Forty-four Russian engineers and 18 enlisted United States soldiers were aboard the Pennsylvania Railroad's Manhattan Limited which sped along the tracks near Baden, Pa., 18 minutes before another passenger train was wrecked Sunday, railroad officials told the Interstate Commerce Commission today.

The wreck—blamed on saboteurs by railroad officials—killed five persons and injured 114 others.

Charles H. Milburn, fireman, of the wrecked train, said he had climbed out of his cab, dazed with injuries, including a broken rib, and saw two men "of medium size" outlined on the bank by the glare of a Bessemer steel converter flaring up across the river.

The 44 Russian engineers arrived at San Pedro, Calif., from Vladivostok on March 12 and were en route to New York and Washington, M. W. Luthi, assistant general passenger agent at Chicago, said in a statement read at the hearing. The soldiers, Luthi reported, were bound from Salt Lake City to Trenton, N. J.

G.O.P. Swings To Aid-Fund Bill in Senate

Asked whether aid to any particular country was in prospect, the Army chief said discussions on defense needs are in progress with several Latin American nations.

"Negotiations are actually going on with Brazil, which has had a commission here for some time, and also with two or three other countries," Marshall said.

Strengthened military ties with Mexico against the possibility of attack is another known objective.

The Senate dedciencies subcommittee meanwhile was making unprecedented haste to conclude committee action on the air appropriation before the weekend. Chairman Adams said hearings will end today and the subcommittee will act on the bill today or tomorrow. The Senate gave the committee permission to file a report while the chamber is in recess to permit Senate consideration of the measure Monday.

Senator Taft indicated he may withhold a move to vote the appropriations on a fiscal year basis rather than for the full life of the bill as planned.

"I do not think $7,000,000,000 is excessive for two years and three months," Taft said. "My only question is whether the appropriation should not be made on an annual basis, with contract authority for the rest. It is a technical question and I may not raise it. I am on record for aid to Britain."

While no formidable opposition was in prospect, and leaders were assured of overwhelming passage, Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, said a "serious effort" would be made to cut the outlay to $3,500,000,000. Attempts to cut it to $5,000,000,000 were crushed in the House.

At yesterday's hearings, Secretaries Stimson and Knox opposed efforts to split the fund into cash appropriations and contract authorizations, contending it would complicate the bookkeeping and otherwise handicap the total aid effort.

William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, and Budget Director Smith will appear before the subcommittee today.

Gen. Marshall, at his press conference, did not disclose whether South American countries would have to arrange for payment in order to participate in the lend-lease program.

Under the previously enacted Pittman Act, Government agencies already are authorized to build on a cost basis defense articles for them here.

The Lend-Lease Act permits aid on a loan basis to any nation whose defense is vital to the defense of the United States.

All Georgia to Go On Eastern Time

Atlanta, Ga., March 20 (AP).—The entire State of Georgia goes on Eastern time under a bill passed today by the Legislature.

The law becomes effective upon its approval by the Governor. An aide of Gov. Eugene Talmadge said the chief executive would sign the act Friday.

New U.S. Hours Mean No Golf, Workers Wail

8 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. It was explained that the summer hours were established after the question was put to a vote throughout the building.

The SSB is located in a renovated apartment house—the old Rochambeau at Seventeenth and I Streets Northwest—and is not equipped with with air conditioning for summer work.

The tabulating section, which held an informal poll yesterday, is quartered on the top floor.

"Working in here until almost 5 p. m. every day is going to be—well—awful," said a young woman employe yesterday, pointing to the low ceiling and lack of cross-ventilation.

The knowledge they must stay in the building through the most humid hours of the day and have little or no time for after-work recreation out of doors is going to "wreck efficiency," others held.

The issue is going to be taken up by Local 10 of the United Federal Workers of America, it was reported.

Although provided with air-conditioning, the Home Owners Loan Corporation and Home Loan Bank Board, housing approximately 1,300 employes at First and Indiana Avenue Northwest, echoed similar sentiments yesterday.

Principal complaints in this agency—which goes to work at 9:15 a. m. and quits at 4:45 p. m. under the new schedule—centered around loss of extra daylight hours for golf, tennis, etc., in the summertime. Last year, the building opened at 8:30 a. m. during hot weather and closed at 4 p. m.

Numerous employes, who attend law classes and other courses after working hours, also protested the new late-closing schedule. Some were fearful they wouldn't be able to make 5 p. m. classes.

At the Federal Power Commission, Eighteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, the 550 workers were overwhelmingly opposed to the new stagger-hour plan.

It was predicted also that employes who don't report until the final hour of 9:15 a. m. will dash downtown at least an hour earlier to find parking spaces before they are all taken—and the traffic jam will be the same as usual.

On the other side of the question, many workers whose reporting hours were changed to 7:30 and 8:15 a. m. were fearful they couldn't get to work on time. These sentiments came largely from persons who live in suburban Virginia and Maryland.

"I'll never get there in time, I know," said Mrs. O. A. Clark, Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

"I'll get there—but I won't like it," said Mrs. L. Search, also of the AAA.

Others said they would have to leave home anywhere from 45 minutes to an hour earlier to make the new schedule.

Then there were those who drive downtown with family or friends who, in many instances, said they would have to "kill an hour or more" before time to report to their desks.

There were suggestions that departments which dislike their assigned hours—early or late—get together and swap for mutual happiness.

From Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen came the comment:

"I knew there would be complaints, but the relief of rush-hour traffic congestion overshadows everything. Those who don't like the new hours better take it up with the President of the United States."

Army Calls Meade Damage Vandalism, Not Sabotage

MALICIOUS DAMAGE—Second Lieut. Wilson R. Buie, jr., of the Army Quartermaster Corps, holds the stub end of a snow and wind support column for barracks at Fort Meade, Md., which had been sawed through. Two of the 12 uprights were cut through, 4 inches off the floor

Reports that construction at Fort Meade, Md., has been delayed and damaged through sabotage were flatly denied last night by the Office of the Quartermaster General here.

The office admitted that there had been individual cases of malicious vandalism, but insisted there was no basis for reports of organized sabotage, rumored yesterday upon discovery that two supports of a new barracks had been sawed through.

Construction officials at the camp said the roof of the barracks could have collapsed under unusual strain had the damage not been discovered. Two of the 12 uprights inside the building were sliced through 4 inches from the second floor.

A spokesman for the Quartermaster General's Office pointed out that of the camp's 1,100 buildings, two posts had been found sawed in two. This, he declared, was no act of sabotage, but rather the mischief or spite of a disgruntled or dismissed worker.

"If there had been any suspicion of sabotage," he declared, "we would have called in the FBI."

The spokesman also deprecated reports from the camp that there had been a series of damage incidents during the last several months. These he blamed to vandalism and carelessness.

It also has been discovered that concrete foundation pillars on several new buildings have been battered with hammers so badly as to necessitate their replacement. Officials said, however, that none was damaged sufficiently to render collapse of the building imminent.

Minor but annoying and expensive acts of vandalism have been committed on the project almost since it was started last October, authorities said, most of which they attributed to ignorance, maliciousness or a spirit of "what the hell" on the part of workmen.

These men, they said, often smashed porcelain electric light sockets with their hammers as they passed through nearly completed buildings, sometimes destroying all sockets from one end of the structure to the other, "just like kids smash street-light globes for no reason at all." Many expensive toilet bowls were shattered in the same manner, they added.

Shortly before the damaged uprights were discovered a man identified as a discharged workman was discovered at night either in the building affected or the one adjoining. He was arrested and escorted from the post by military police when he was unable to give an account of himself.

Girl Scouts to Hold Banquet Tonight

The eleventh annual camp banquet of the Washington Girl Scouts will be held at Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, tonight at 6:30. The toastmistress will be Jeane Lewis, secretary of the junior camp committee. Other members of the committee are Martha Alexander, Jean Izzell, Bing Lind, Aimee Loftin, Betty Burghizer, Jane Warren, Martha Smoot and Alice Coffman.

Dr. Fishbein Denies Plotting

mercantile magnate, was head of the Twentieth Century and Good Will Funds, which gave financial support to help launch G. H. A.

Then, in July of 1937, when Dr. Fishbein was en route to Europe, Filene happened to be a passenger aboard the same ship, and the two men briefly discussed plans to develop the Government workers' clinic here, said the witness.

He disclaimed any correspondence on G. H. A. with the District Medical Society (a codefendant with the American Medical Association), as well as any discussions on the subject with Dr. William Dick Cutter or Dr. R. G. Leland, A. M. A. colleagues, who testified earlier in the trial.

Admits Responsibility

He genially admitted responsibility for every line of text appearing in the Journal, more than 100,000 copies of which go out weekly to A. M. A. members, libraries and medical schools. His responsibility, thus, covered the article of October 2, 1937, which blasted Group Health Association.

"What did you have to do with that article?" Leahy asked Dr. Fishbein.

"It was submitted to me by Dr. Woodward (William C., also a defendant) and I made certain suggestions, then returned it to him," was the reply.

Of the 13 Washington practitioners who are codefendants in the Government's Sherman Act case, Dr. Fishbein said he knew only Dr. A. C Christie, Dr. Thomas E. Neill and Dr. Wallace M. Yater up to the beginning of the trial.

Dr. Yater, incidentally, was drafted for an emergency professional chore yesterday. When a colored woman fainted in a corridor behind the courtroom, a deputy marshal stepped in and wiggled a finger in the direction of Dr. Yater, seated in the defendants' box. He gave first aid, then returned promptly to the courtroom.

Dr. Fishbein said he attended no meetings concerned with the G. H. A. question—"I wasn't invited to any and I don't go without an invitation"—and was acquainted with no members of the cooperative, or any of its staff doctors.

Jury members, who are beginning to show signs of weariness (the trial began February 5), perked up when Dr. Fishbein, identifying himself at Leahy's request, rattled off the names of societies with which he is associated and the list of duties for which he is responsible.

They smiled when the witness said he is "journalistic by instinct," in explaining why he asked a Washington golfing partner—a dairyman—if any of his employes evinced any interest in the controversy over G. H. A.

The single question in cross-examination by Prosecutor John Henry Lewin revolved about that incident. Dr. Fishbein said the dairyman, after checking with his employes, reported back to him that they did not seem particularly concerned with the Group Health Association-District Medical Society scrap.

"And you found this heartening?" Lewin asked.

Dr. Fishbein conceded that he did.

Yielding the witness chair to the Journal editor was Dr. Olin West, general manager and secretary of the American Medical Association, who completed testimony begun on Wednesday.

Until the beginning of cross-examination by Grant W. Kelleher, Lewin's associate on prosecution counsel, Dr. West's time on the stand was spent chiefly in identifying correspondence pertaining directly or indirectly to G. H. A.

Also Denies Charges

Like Dr. Fishbein, Dr. Woodward, Dr. Cutter and Dr. Leland—all high-ranking A. M. A. officials at the time of the alleged conspiracy in 1937 and 1938—Dr. West denied each charge of restraint as it was read to him by Leahy. Like them, he said he had been interested only in gathering facts about the cooperative.

The cross-interrogation developed into 75 minutes of sparring between prosecutor and witness in which little definite, clear-cut evidence was adduced. Dr. Fishbein admitted that, after obtaining information on G. H. A. he was opposed to the enterprise "because it seemed to be a corporate practice of medicine."

Asked if, as of February, 1938, he felt that any physician who would sell his services to G. H. A. was unethical, the witness answered in the affirmative.

The first of the Washington defendants is expected to testify today. Their counsel did not indicate whom this would be.

Mrs. Willis' Condition Called 'Satisfactory'

Mrs. Raymond Willis, wife of the Republican Senator from Indiana, who underwent an emergency appendectomy last Wednesday at Sibley Memorial Hospital, last night was said to be in a "satisfactory" condition by hospital authorities. U. S. Begins Vast Fund Raising Move in ten years, sold for 75 per cent of maturity value and redeemable at maturity for a price equivalent to an interest return of 2.9 per cent per annum, compounded semiannually. No one may buy more than $5,000 worth in one year. The denominations are $25, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. These are intended for the "small investor." Only individuals can buy them.

"Series F" Savings Bonds, for larger investors, sold for 74 per cent of maturity value, maturing in 12 years. Not only individuals, but also trustees, associations, pension funds and corporations may buy these up to $50,000 worth a year. The interest yield, if they are held to maturity, approximates 2.53 per cent a year. The denominations are $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000.

Series G Pays 2½ Per cent

"Series G" Savings Bonds, sold at par, and paying interest of 2½ per cent every half year, in contrast to the other bonds that are sold with the interest discounted in advance. Investors other than individuals may also buy these bonds, up to a total of $50,000 a year. The denominations are the same as for Series F.

In addition, the Treasury is going to sell Postal Savings Stamps to encourage youngsters, who could not afford to buy a $25 bond for a lump payment of $18.75, to save up for a Defense Bond.

Postoffices will distribute stamps priced at 10 cents, 25 cents, 50 cents, $1 and $5. These are similar to the present Postal Savings Stamp, with the exception of the new $5 stamp. Youngsters and others can buy these stamps, paste them in a booklet also distributed by the Government, and turn in the book when it is completely filled for a $25 bond. It takes $18.75 in stamps to buy the bond, which is worth $25 after ten years.

The same stamp saving system has been arranged for purchase of $50 and $100 bonds.

Sales Campaign Mapped

A sales campaign, without high-pressure methods, but as vast as the Liberty Loan drives during the World War, has been mapped to sell the securities.

An entire new division of the Treasury, called the Defense Savings Staff, is being recruited under the supervision of Harold N. Graves, assistant to the Secretary.

Morgenthau announced that Eugene W. Sloan would be administrative director; Gale F. Johnston, St. Louis insurance man, field director, and Harford Powel, former editor of Collier's magazine, director of information.

B. M. Edward, South Carolina banker, who was named an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Wednesday, will coordinate the huge program with the Nation's banking system.

On Sale May 1

On May 1, the new securities will go on sale at 16,000 postoffices, at Federal Reserve Banks and at the United States Treasury.

"In meeting the cost of this tremendous effort," sa'd the Treasury Secretary, "the Government must do more than find billions of dollars. It must find these dollars in a way that will best safeguard the Nation against the evils of inflation and will give all American citizens a sense of taking a direct part in the defense of the country."

The part these new bonds are intended to play in the move to prevent inflation, it was said, is to act as a siphon to draw the savings of the public out of normal spending channels and put them to work for the Government.

The bonds have been so devised that there is a definite inducement to hold them until maturity, that is, for either 10 or 12 years, according to the type of bond. The interest rate gets better and better on the new bonds as the years roll by, with the exception, of course, of the Series G bonds, which pay regular interest each year of 2½ per cent.

D. C. Man, Woman Held in Chatham

Chatham, Va., March 20 (AP).—Sheriff Arch Overbey said tonight that he had arrested a man and woman, listed as Leonard Leo Randall and Mary Lee, of Washington, D. C., on the outskirts of Chatham about 7 p. m., and booked them on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Sheriff Overbey asserted that the two were "posing" as Government agents.

Discarded Powder Explodes, Shakes Kenvil, N. J., Area

Kenvil, N. J., March 20 (AP).—Old powder being burned on an isloated refuse heap at the Hercules Powder Co. plant exploded at noon today with an earth-shaking force that threw areas to the east into a near-panic yet, went almost unnoticed by residents here.

"Nobody hurt, no damage done, everything O.K.," was the terse way in which J. A. Strutchers, plant superintendent, described it.

Patrolman Edward Higgins said the old powder, mingled with other refuse at the "burning ground," caused the blast. He said there was no fire after the explosion.

SEC Orders Power Utility Be Dissolved

Invoking for the first time its 6-year-old "death sentence" powers, the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday ordered the dissolution of the United Light & Power Co., top unit in a $800,000,000 utility system, and of United American Co., one of its subsidiaries.

Thee order was the first of a series that is expected to issue against a dozen giant utility holdmg companies, including the North American Co., which owns Washington public utilities, and the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation.

Chairman Jerome N. Frank announced the move a few hours after he had been confirmed as a judge of the Second Judicial Circuit Court.

Bottleneck Vanishes

"We have definitely broken the back of the integration problem; the bottleneck is beginning to vanish," said Frank.

The SEC chairman described the commission's action as one vital to national defense.

"Holding companies have impeded new utility financing," he asserted. "Operating utility companies must build new facilities that must play an important role in national defense. Integration will make it possible for the operating companies to do this necessary financing."

The order issued yesterday was designed to integrate financially the United Light & Power system which has 23 operating subsidiaries in 14 States.

The order enforces the so-called "great-grandfather" clause which forbids a utility holding company system to exceed a maximum of three "tiers" of companies. United Light & Power was found to have five tiers.

SEC Orders Dissolution

To simplify this structure, the SEC ordered the top company, United Light and Power to dissolve, and also to get rid of United American Co., which holds sway over part of U. L. & P.'s system.

The SEC did not specify how the corporate simplification would be accomplished. Chairman Frank pointed out that there are four usual methods: Selling the securities of the companies to be liquidated, swapping operating companies with some other utility system, distributing securities to the company's security holders, or sterilizing voting power of some of the securities.

Roosevelt Urges Older Marines For Guard Duty

President Roosevelt was disclosed yesterday to have requested that young marines from 18 to 20 years old be replaced by older men for police duty at Navy Yards because he was "very disturbed" about the present setup.

The disclosure was made in testimony by Jerome Doyle, executive assistant to the Secretary of the Navy, on the $3,446,000,000 Naval supply bill. It was made public by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Because "there are no older marines," since most of the present strength has been recruited in the last 18 to 24 months, Doyle urged approval of funds for establishment of a civilian police force of 3,000 for Navy Yards to supplement the present marine guards. The committee, however, refused this request.

$100,000 in D. C. Income Taxes Already Collected

Although deadline for the payment of first half of the District's income tax is more than three weeks away, residents have paid in about $100,000 since January 1 to the tax collector.

Since the first of the year, the income tax collections, including those from corporations, amount to more than $20,000, according to Collector Guy W. Pearson. Corporations pay their taxes on the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of their fiscal year.

In addition to the money actually paid to the collector, some 5,000 pieces of mail, containing income tax returns, is still awaiting compilation. The income tax deadline is April 15 for the first half and October 15 for the second half.

Pearson said the deadline on the second half payment of the real estate and personal property tax is the last day of the month.

Reich Consuls Get War Questionnaire

Germany is making a survey of its consular staffs to determine how many persons would have to be transported home in event of a break in relations with this country, it was disclosed yesterday. German sources said the checkup was "routine" and applied to other countries as well as the United States.

German consulates were asked what members of their staffs would wish to return to Germany in such an emergency and for whom transportation and other arrangements would have to be made by the government.

German sources said the questionnaire had been sent out by Berlin some months ago to consulates in all countries.

Rep. Rich Would Hire 10 U. S. Men To 'Get Hitler'

By the Associated Press

Representative Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania, almost always economy-minded, told the House Wednesday that if it would appropriate $5,000,000 he'd use it to "get 10 red-blooded Americans to go over and get Hitler."

Rich had proposed an amendment to the $7,000,000,000 British aid bill which would have stricken out a $350,000,000 agricultural item "unless Great Britain lifts the blockade to permit food to go to the starving women and children of Europe."

Asked by Representative O'Neal (Democrat), Kentucky, how he would meet the threat of Hitler, Rich made his suggestion for the 10-man expeditionary force amid boos and catcalls from the floor.

A point of order against Rich's amendment was sustained.

U. S. Probes Rise In Cost of Land Needed for Defense

By the Associated Press

The Justice Department said yesterday that it was investigating "exorbitant values" placed on land needed for national defense, specifically property at El Paso, Tex., and Louisville, Ky.

Norman M. Littell, chief of the lands division, said that the department would "exhaust every legal resource to put such properties through the wringer."

The Government, he said, is engaged in a land acquisition program which was "more than three times greater than the largest such program in any previous year in our history and, from all indications, will be still larger next year. Where there is an obvious effort to make a great profit at the expense of national defense, the property will be taken through every court to which an appeal will lie."

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

FOUR-STAR SHOREHAM SHOW. It'll be a species of "Old Home Week" in the Shoreham come next Monday. Amusement Manager Max Lowe has sifted his programs for the last two seasons and chosen four acts that were standout hits on previous visits. They're Earl Lawrence, splendid baritone singer whom you've often heard on the Rudy Vallee hour; Woods and Bray, who danced in the Blue Room for weeks on end with flawless grace; True and Trudy, the "Golden Pair," who look like a pair of gilded idols in their acrobatic act; Tap-stepper Honey Murray, who's booked for a big Hollywood opportunity around Easter . . . Everyone around the Shoreham regretted the departure of the Music Hall Boys, but they'll probably be back before too long. They've been in the Blue Room for a total of 14 weeks during their three recent engagements.

Evelyn Knight, nightingale of the King Cole Room, has just had an operation to remove those tiny scars left on her face after that auto accident of last year. Last trace of 'em will be gone in a copia months.

RINGSTER INTO EMCEE. There was a special reason for Al Schenk, new emcee at Paul Young's, being introduced from the ring at the Corchado-Forte fight on Monday. Al is an ex-middleweight (though he looks like a heavyweight now) and a cousin of famed "Slapsie Maxie" Rosenbloom, who has likewise traded in his boxing gloves for a spot in show business. Al's done well, too,—played in Earl Carroll's vanities, vaudeville and countless top night clubs, also made movie shorts.

APPRECIATORS OF ART naturally appreciate Carmen Cavallaro's music. After the gala opening of the new National Art Gallery, many of the be-ermined and be-diamonded guests finished the evening in the Cosmos Room and proved themselves connoisseurs of conga music, as well as Murillos.

"TUNE QUIZ" is the new game in the Neptune Room. The Dalton Boys pick two tables for competition every night. The idea is to identify the titles and composers of various numbers played. The winners become the "Quiz Champs" of the evening . . . The new Balkan Room, adjoining Neptune, is lovely in tones of maroon and canary. A dashing maid of the Balkans adorns the entrance.

Tonight's the night for the dual debut of Wardman's new Burgundy Room, and Jack Coffey's combined orchestra and floor show, a marvelous novelty. It'll be a wonderful christening! The Burgundy Room will be open on Fridays and Saturdays. On other nights the Coffey diversion will hold forth in the Metronome Room.

THE RHYTHM BOYS. Ralph Cannon, who combines drumming and singing so ingratiatingly at the Rainbow Room, can also tootle a sax. He was saxist at the Enright Theater in Pittsburgh (his home town) when Dick Powell was master of ceremonies . . . Bob Holben, newest addition to Pete Macias' Lounge Riviera orchestra, is a treasure of versatility. He plays clarinet, flute, cornet, sax, dulcetone—and sings . . . Hi Hat's Jimmy Summerville has added a new singing guitarist, Don Marto, to his Four M's . . . "Ha-Cha" Gardner, of Dick Koons' band in the Mayflower Lounge, goes in for arty photography.

TONSIL OR NO TONSILS? Bob Pregle, singing emcee of Casino Royal, is in a predicament. Medicos have suggested amputating his tonsils and told him frankly that there would be five ensuing possibilities: He might lose his voice, its range might become either higher or lower, his vocalistics might be improved, or his voice might be unchanged.

PRETTY MIDRIFFS. The question of frocks with midriff cut-outs promises to become more burning as the weather gets warmer. Sauciest version we've seen is being worn by Dancer Betty De Witt at the Lotus. There's a midriff gap of full six inches between the gown's top of hyacinth blue ruffling and its rose-red pleated skirt . . . Eileen George of the Anchor Room recently wore a quasi-midriff dress to a very formal party. The open space was filled up with flesh colored tulle that looked like nothing at all until you were about two feet away . . . Mayfair's Adele Van is wondering whether to wear midriff frocks when she sings with Paul Kain's band at Glen Echo next summer. There are a lot of breezes in that Glen Echo ballroom.

Prince Akbar, the picturesque and beturbaned Indian palm reader, who was such a fad with Troika's society clientele a few months ago, will return there in a couple of days.

ATMOSPHERE. The Pall Mall Room has what fancy writers call "distinguished atmosphere." Its restful but subtle color scheme of pale peach and russet is pointed up by changing ceiling lighting that may range from turquoise to startling fuchsia . . . The extreme smartness of the Silver Fox setting of varied blues and silver undoubtedly plays a big part in its popularity with many of our town's nicest young folks . . . The Cafe Caprice uncannily combines the effects of space, intimacy and luxury. It is two stories high, has a tiny dance floor, mirrored balconies and the weirdest murals you'll ever see . . . The new Plymouth has the biggest bar in town. It's a masterpiece in modernly treated oak, has as much space as some apartments.

GIRL EMCEE SCORES. Peppery and pulchritudinous Barbara Gray is now in her thirteenth week as singing mistress of ceremonies at Kavakos' Grill. She's blond, poised, quick-witted, has plenty of "know-how." She not only heads the weekend floor shows, but sings every night, introduces flocks of amateur entertainers, presides over the Thursday hobby horse races.

CIRO'S FAMOUS VILLAGE has all the appeal of New York's Greenwich Village in its palmiest days. When "Mayor" Ciro isn't playing the French horn (of which he's a real master), he's wise-cracking at the "mike", or mingling with the customers, encouraging the five or six who always seem to want to get into the floor show. Theatrical parties are numerous and the evenings expand into a carnival of hilarity around midnight.

Rodd Raffell and his Nightingale band will come to Washington next Sunday afternoon for a matinee dance, the "Spring Swing" at the Knights of Columbus Hall. Time is 4 to 7 p. m.

CHR. HEURICH BREWING CO., WASHINGTON, D. C.

Pan-American Solidarity Held 'Patriotic Duty'

Eight hundred Washington public school and library officials, opening the first cooperative spring conference of District educational associations, heard Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, declare a unity of purpose in the Western Hemisphere is necessary for the preservation of New World democracy.

In the Hall of Nations of the Pan American Union building Rowe told the educational leaders that hemisphere solidarity is vital if the 21 American republics are not to become "regimented and militarized in the most advance sense."

The union head declared that should Britain fall and the Axis aim its next thrusts at South America, the whole democratic system of the Western world would be in danger of destruction.

"It Is Up to Us"

The speaker called upon the educators to set an example of inter-American amity, saying:

"It is up to us—to you and me—as citizens of the United States to cultivate with citizens of the other American republics an understanding, a cooperative point of view upon which the unity of these republics must ultimately depend."

Rowe asserted that "important as cooperation with other American nations has been in the past, it has now risen to the level of a patriotic duty."

He traced the history of Pan American conferences since the first, at the time of Simon Bolivar, and emphasized that in the last decade the Monroe Doctrine had become "a continental doctrine . . . supported by all the American republics."

Galarza Speaks

"We hope the suspicion that the Monroe Doctrine is a cloak for North American imperialism has been dispelled forever," Rowe concluded.

Ernesto Galarza, chief of the union's division of labor and social information, told of plans for disseminating Latin-American literature and historical data in elementary and high schools. He suggested that schools systems form committees of teachers to cooperate with the union in achieving this end.

In the musical half of the program the following artists performed: Rosita Rios, Puerto Rican soprano; Vincente de la Garza, Mexican tenor, and Marta de la Torre, Cuban violinist. The Pan American Choral Society sang under the direction of Maida F. D'Aulby.

Reno, March 20 (AP).—Mrs. Ogden Goelet, daughter of the violinist, Efrem Zimbalist, won an uncontested divorce today on grounds of cruelty.

The former Maria Virginia Zimbalist married Goelet in New York City April 19, 1938, soon after he had been divorced here by his first wife.

The Gallup Poll

Survey Reveals Nation Continues 8 to 2 Against Active Entrance Into War Abroad

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., March 20.—With the passage of the lease-lend bill one question of paramount interest to the Nation is the question—how far along the road to war is the United States?

How far has public sentiment advanced toward war?

There are many people who believe that the United States is already in the war, and others who think the country has chosen a path that will inevitably end in our active participation in the European conflict.

Despite these points of view, one undeniable fact remains—the people of the United States, as of this week, are still overwhelmingly opposed to our entering the war. This attitude may be merely the expression of a hope.

If, for example, the Ludlow Amendment, which would require a vote of the people before entering a foreign war, were now part of the Constitution, the chances are overwhelming that the public would vote against a declaration of war. The evidence on this score comes from repeated Nationwide surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion on the following question:

"If you were asked to vote on the question of the United States entering the war against Germany and Italy, how would you vote—to go into the war, or to stay out of the war?"

A survey on that issue completed during the period ending March 15 shows the following division of sentiment:

Stay out 83

The last previous survey made with the identical question and an exactly comparable cross-section of the American public in every State showed 15 per cent for going to war, 85 per cent for staying out.

As a matter of fact, sentiment for active entrance into the war is slightly lower today than it was in June, 1940, when France fell. At that time 10 per cent were in favor of going to war.

The public's attitude on the war question is completely consistent with the views it has held during the entire war to date, and in fact, for even during the year preceding the war. In that period the public has been guided by two basic desires—the desire to give "all aid short of war" to England, and the desire to avoid sending our army into another world war.

It was found in recent studies that whereas the number of persons favoring the lease-lend bill outnumbered those opposed by a ratio of 2 to 1, nevertheless a large proportion of the very persons who favored the bill were opposed to American entrance into the war. The country, in fact, believed the passage of the lease-lend bill would be more likely to keep us out of the war than to get us in.

The American public, as judged by the Institute's surveys, has become increasingly willing to help England "even at the risk of war," but throughout the year there has been no important change in the number who believe we should not enter the conflict as an active belligerent.

This attitude may, in terms of the psychologist, represent mere "wishful thinking," and it may spring from a lack of understanding of the realities in the present world conflict. Nevertheless it represents the view of the great majority of people from coast to coast.

As in previous surveys, the Southern States show the highest vote for war—20 per cent—and the West Central farming area the lowest, 14 per cent.

SUNDAY—Beginning Sunday the Gallup Poll begins a series of four reports on the public's attitude toward labor.

'Topper Returns' With All His Eerie Ghosts

Joan Blondell and Roland Young Capitol Stars In Another Manifestation of the Supernatural; Benny Davis' 'Stardust Revue' on the Stage

"TOPPER RETURNS." United Artists release of Hal Roach's picturization of an original screen play by Jonathan Latimer, based on characters conceived by the late Thorne Smith, featuring Joan Blondell, Roland Young and Carole Landis, with Billie Burke, Dennis O'Keefe, Patsy Kelly, H. B. Warner, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, George Zucco, Donald MacBride, Rafaelo Ottiano and Trevor Bardette. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

BELL

"TOPPER RETURNS" to find himself in the midst of a bit of dramaturgic perplexity. The Hal Roach film play that brings him back to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater this week, undertakes the ticklish business of attempting to blend the salient elements of such a "horror picture" as Boris Karloff might be starred in with the comic frivolities that have characterized such celluloid flippancies as "My Man Godfrey"—to draw the thing a trifle fine—or, say, "Ghost Breakers." The two opposing factors do not always jell too well, but there is never a time, either, when the one gets dangerously in the way of the other.

The Carrington estate, perched on a high and bleak hill, was no place for a couple of beautiful young women to go to while away a hectic "vacation" visiting the "father" of one of them. He turned out not to be her father at all, but a murderous wretch trying to do something or other about the fortune of a former partner, who had made too much money out of that tungsten mine—if that is what it was. Anyhow, when they arrived there, top-heavy chandeliers began to fall with poor aim at innocent heads, secret panels nudged themselves out of place, a murder or two cropped up and exciting ectoplasms began to materialize and disappear miraculously at he will of the unhappily deceased.

Out of this strange medley of harrowing and hilarious situations the veteran Hal Roach has contrived a screen hybrid that is about evenly divided between chills-and-fever and laughs, springing from the deepest recesses of the human anatomy. The thing is not so adroit as the original "Topper," but, at least, it is an effective exercise of ingenuity and another demonstration of the sort of photographic wizardry that can sprout laughs in most unexpected places and on apparently barren soil. It is this constant obtrusion of the surprising quality of the unexpected that gives the picture its fillip.

It would be difficult to pick a quarrel with the cast of "Topper Returns." Roland Young perpetuates the titular figure he created in the original and Billie Burke still is his fluttery and feather-brained wife. That in itself would be assurance enough of competent comedy, but Patsy Kelly also is along for this trip into the supernatural and so is Eddie "Rochester" Anderson who, at one point in the play, concludes that he had better return to Mr. Benny, "Nothing like this ever happened to me with him." The foremost of the wraiths—the gal who is snuffed out early in the picture, only to haunt the thing from then on in ethereal form—is played by Joan Blondell, who performs a pretty chore of being visible and invisible at will. Carole Landis as her catastrophic hostess in the house of horrors still leaves this department a little dubious of her capabilities as a "great actress" but convinced of her value as a decoration. H. B. Warner, the masquerading murderer of the goings-on; George Zucco, as the questionable medical expert; Donald MacBride, in the role of the inevitably humorous police sergeant; Rafaelo Ottiano, admirable character actress, cast this time as an ominous housekeeper, and Dennis O'Keefe, as the nonplused taxi driver, add their mighty mites on the side of Mr. Roach's persistent pursuit of apoplectic pastiming.

We shall carry no coals to Newcastle this week about Benny Davis' new "Stardust Revue." Benny has gone and done it again. His youngsters on this occasion are as ebullient, as talented and as completely "on their toes" as his embryonic stars always are. Under the directorial guidance of the Old Master, they put on a show that has speed, spontaneity and spread-eagle scope. There is a little of everything in it, from baton-swinging and rope-spinning to singularly seductive singing, acrobatic dancing of the first water and a horizontal bar act that is the best of its kind these myopic eyes ever have waked up to watch. Marie "Butch" Austin, one of the few repeaters in the act, is back again with her saucily sung songs and Beatrice Howell, I think it is, who does some throaty threnodies that leave the audience piled up in heaps in the aisles. Billy Blake is no mean man with a trumpet and June Preisser might as well begin now as any time to view with alarm the extraordinary acrobatic and contortionistic supremacy of Ruby Ring—and I hope I have these names on straight. Those two horizontal bar artists—and they are artists—are Kenny and Norris. The Three Wiles, Don Hooton, Betty Jane Smith and Jerry Bressler, are among the others Benny has under his wing this season. And his own revival of his own songs is not so bad, either—especially if your memory goes back far enough.

Sam Jack Kaufman's orchestral antics, Art Brown's organfest and the Fox Movietone News are the chief auxiliaries of a feature not quite able to erase the thought that the first "Topper" was better.

as he appears in the title role of his latest and greatest picture, "The Great Dictator," now in the second week of its popular-priced run at Loew's Palace Theater. The other half of the time during the film, the master comic is seen in his familiar "vagabond" character, in this instance a war-shocked little barber in the Ghetto

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 20.

Frank Capra worked himself out of the John Doe class by showing Hollywood and the world through his pictures that the John Does are a pretty swell bunch of guys. But this film based on his idea, while entertaining, falls down at the end.

HOPPER

The individual performances are great. Regis Toomey's scene moved me more than anything else in the picture. After that came Jimmy Gleason's drunk scene. Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Eddie Arnold, and Walter Brennan were all you expected them to be. But if you're basing a story on "love thy neighbor," then I think you've got to follow through. If a principle is worth living for, it's worth dying for. And while I like happy endings if they're logical, I wanted to see Gary Cooper take that leap off the City Hall, instead of watching Eddie Arnold's "Scrooge routine." "Meet John Doe" is class entertainment. But as a knockout social document, it doesn't quite jell.

Although there's not a dance in "Tom, Dick, and Harry," the picture's been made to a waltz tempo. As soon as Ginger Rogers finishes a scene, she relaxes to waltz and rhumba records. And even the prop men move about the set in time to the music . . . When Ginger noticed Freddie Flack shuffling to a dance tune on the set, she said, "There's something professional about the way you handle your feet." "It's a hangover from my old George M. Cohan days," explained Flack. "I used to dance with Cohan 25 years ago" . . .

H. V. Kaltenborn has been getting first-hand information from our movie mogul Harry Warner and the other lads, and is completely won over to cinemaland.

When Mary Howard was in Palm Springs, a friend gifted her with a Stetson hat—her pride and joy. She went shopping the other day, and lo and behold walked out of a shop forgetting her hat. Went back and demanded one, which they gave her, got home and discovered she hadn't worn a hat that day. Why, Mary!

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 20 (INS).—Crisp Margaret Sullavan, who is at her best as a modern, intelligent girl of the present period, is set to play a newspaper reporter in "The Man Who Lived Alone," at Universal. Of course there is the little matter of the stork to reckon with, but so eager is Joe Pasternak to get Maggie that he is postponing the picture until the long-legged bird has delivered his precious package and she is well enough to return to the studio. Maggie's husband, Leland Heyward, says he won't be disappointed if the new baby is a girl—even though they already have two debutantes in the family.

PARSONS

Here's what I call an interesting piece of news: Rise Stevens, the American girl who was so enthusiastically received when she sang at the Metropolitan, is to be teamed with Nelson Eddy in "The Chocolate Soldier." Nelson finishes his concert tour in April and Miss Stevens heads for Hollywood about the same time.

When Columbia bought the popular cartoon, "Blondie," no one knew that Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton would make Dagwood and Blondie come to life and that the fans would adore them and cry for more of these amusing comedies of home life. But that's exactly what has happened and while "Blondie" has been established as entertainment, Arthur and Penny have become increasingly popular. Now Penny will do an outside musical, "Lady Buckaroo," and Arthur Lake will do a conscription yarn, "Pack Up Your Troubles."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Ernest Truex, the diminutive actor, and Sylvia Fields, stage actress, were married in New York Sunday; Laird Cregar has the measles and that's a lot of territory for even the measles to cover; Eddie Hillman slipped and hurt his ankle and he is now on crutches; L. B. Mayer is giving Jimmie Stewart a farewell party in the executives' dining room tomorrow.

Rita Hayworth, who leaves for Mexico on the James Roosevelt "Pot o' Gold" junket, goes by boat April 1; that was Bunny Hartley, Twentieth Century-Fox model, at Ciro's with George Raft. Where was Betty Grable Noel Coward at the Scheherazade asking the orchestra to play Cole Porter's songs; Alice Faye and Phil Harris dropping in at the Charlie Foy Night Club for a midnight snack; June Duprez and Phil Reed, glimpsed at the Brown Derby; also Gene Markey and his little daughter, Melinda.

The Herbert Marshalls, Bette Davis and her bridegroom, Arthur Farnsworth, all left on the same train for the East today.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 20.

CAUTION: W. Averell Harriman, the President's special envoy to London, is most reserved in matters of state. But he knows also that his wife, Marie Harriman, is anxious about his safety and welfare . . . And so on Monday Mrs. Harriman received a cablegram from her cautious husband. Its simple message was "Just Spent An Interesting Weekend." Not until Marie Harriman read the next day's news dispatches from London did she learn what her husband meant by "interesting." For he had spent the weekend with Winston Churchill, gave and received assurances of mutual aid, plus a promise that Americans would diet, if necessary, to supply Britain with food shipments.

COMPLIMENT: Elizabeth Talbot-Martin of "Meet the People" went to the Dutch Treat Club, where she entertained the members with her imitation of Eleanor Roosevelt . . . A man approached her and said: "You're even better than Alice" . . . "Alice?" asked Miss Talbot-Martin. "Don't you mean Eleanor?" . . . "No, I mean my sister, who also does imitations of Eleanor," explained Theodore Roosevelt, jr. "I mean Alice Longworth."

ENTERPRISE: Sherwood Anderson, who died in Panama this month, always had yearned to publish a small-town newspaper. During one of his recent visits to New York the noted writer told some local newspaper men about the advantages of putting out a country newspaper . . . "But, Mr. Anderson," one reporter asked him, "how can you build up a good staff in a small town?" . . . "Oh, that's easy," he replied. "All you have to do is write a lot of articles under different names."

FASHIONS: When Fred of John Frederics was invited to attend the fashion show at Marshall Field's in Chicago the department store officials wired him: "Come, even if you have to wear burlap." Fred made a literal response to that plea. He startled the Chicago fashionables by having a burlap suit made to his order and wearing it at the show there . . . When he returned to New York his partner, John, asked him. "Well, did that burlap suit get the laughs you expected?" . . . "No," informed Fred, exhibiting the signed slips, "I got two big orders for such suits."

CHATTER: On March 28 Collier's will publish an article by Col. Lindbergh—with the Lindbergh slant unaltered . . . Universal Films has improved so much, that the First National Bank of Boston is extending credit . . . The Nassau vacationers are mystified by the eight-day trips being taken so frequently by "The Southern Cross," the yacht owned by Wenner-Gren . . . Noel Coward returned to New York yesterday . . . Sinclair Lewis is settling in Connecticut . . . Assistant United States Attorney Walter Gahagan is presenting to a Federal grand jury a case involving a bankruptcy ring. A Pennsylvania legislator has been subpenaed to appear before it.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

The best thing about our Congress is that it's never unanimous like beans in the Army.

At the present time the most important branch of Congress is the Committee on Foreign Affairs which is in better shape than the butcher's cat, busier than a headache powder in water and more important than a stopper in a bath tub.

One thing I will guarantee is that by the time a bill gets through Congress it has been kicked around like a hat in a barroom fight and talked over like a society marriage.

I notice that the aid bill was voted 336 to 55, which proves my contention that in a democracy every man is his own judge of the weather; that some of the legislators wear long underwear, some wear summer underwear and some none.

Of those 55 negatives there were Republicans, Democrats, Progressives and American-Labors. Which definitely proves my argument that the ideal form of government is to be in office.

Capitana Monicker For Taylor's Horse

By popular demand Robert Taylor's new horse, the one he bought to ride in "Billy the Kid," has been named Capitana.

When Bob said he was looking for a good name for the animal hundreds of letters suggesting names arrived at the studio. The name that occurred more often was the Spanish Capitan, which means, of course, captain. But since the steed had originally been known as Lady, this did not seem fitting. A compromise was reached and the beautiful black animal is now known as Capitana.

Willkie's Sister, Wife of Attache In Berlin, Is Back

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, March 20.—Mrs. Paul E. Pihl, sister of Wendell L. Willkie and wife of Commander Pihl, United States Naval Asir Attache at Berlin, was busy catching up on the details her brother's campaign for the Presidency and his subsequent trip to England, as she settled down today for a visit with her sister-in-law at the Willkie home here.

She had "done 24-hour duty on the radio" during the campaign, she said, and even had her meals served in the room with the radio on election night.

When Willkie was touring England recently, she added, she followed his every move by the radio, even to hearing the cheering of the crowds.

The commander's wife said she was unable to comment for publication on anything concerning affairs in Germany. She has lived there for three years. She expects soon to go to Washington.

Baldwin Sworn In

Joseph Clark Baldwin, Republican, was sworn in Wednesday by Speaker Rayburn as the new member of Congress for the Seventeenth New York District.

Britons Fly Home With Nazi Planes, Bomb Airport

London, March 20 (U.P.).—The air ministry told today about a crew of Royal Air Force daredevils who discovered a method of bombing German airports at night without drawing antiaircraft fire.

An R. A. F. pilot over enemy territory recently sneaked his bomber into a squadron of homeward-bound German planes, the ministry said. Their airport gave the landing signal and a member of the R. A. F. crew signalled "Heil Hitler" on his flash lamp.

As the squadron idled in for a landing, the R. A. F. plane dumped its load of bombs on the hangars and zoomed away unharmed.

Truck Trailer Injures Rome Art Treasure

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 20.—A priceless work of renaissance art was seriously damaged when the trailer of a truck crashed against a wall of a building which bore a famous fresco by Filippo Lippi, the Giornale d'Italia writes today.

The accident occured in Prato, Tuscany. The stone framework of the fresco crumbled, the newspaper says, and fragments of the fresco itself were found among the debris. The work, which presented in a triptych the Virgin Mary with the infant Jesus and two saints, was one of Lippi's masterpieces.

Statistical note: "The Great Dictator" has entered its second week of its second engagement of the season at the Palace.

Thereby the Charlie Chaplin film proves that its star-director-author remains one of the films' great drawing cards after something of a lifetime at his warming buffoonery. That his angered soul has decided to toss barbs more bitter than is his wont at a man an entertainment-bent public might prefer to forget, is secondary to the fact that "The Great Dictator" has its merry moments as well as its satiric ones.

Chaplin plays a dual role, a frenzied dictator and a pathetic Jewish barber who happens to look like him. Jack Oakie is a rival ruler and Paulette Goddard is the romantic interest. You probably have heard all this before, but so definite an F Street record seemed a good time to remind you that "The Great Dictator" is still with us and something not to be missed.

Inhospitable!

At precisely 21 minutes past 7 o'clock last night the Lady Springtime, in a glory of gauze and ribbons, arrived in this Northern Hemisphere and scarcely anybody was on hand to welcome her. Even her closest and most doting friend had forgotten about her. The poets were at home preoccupied with their dinners; the fanciful young men were absorbed in the comic strips or in panel discussions of the future of civilization; and the wistful maidens were mending the rips in their stockings.

Come to think of it, this is the kind of welcome the Little Lady generally gets from us. After she has gone we write to her piteously of how much we miss her, how ardently we wish her return, yet not one in a thousand, perhaps not one in a million, goes to the trouble of finding out the exact hour and moment of her arrival. Considering all the fuss we make over a mere chronological convention like the New Year, how we wait up virtually all night to greet him, this neglect of the Lady Springtime by her supposed admirers is incomprehensible and outrageous.

To be sure here in Washington we are so accustomed to the arrival and departure of celebrities that it takes something out of the ordinary like a king and queen or a genuine Hollywood belle to excite us. But we think the Lady Springtime deserves at least ambassadorial honors. And though we know that the bigwigs at the Department of State, what with wars, world crises and such things are pretty busy nowadays, it does seem that one or two of them might have put on their top hats and turned out for her.

It is no wonder that the Little Lady, finding herself thus ignored, often goes off into such a fit of sulks and tears that it's almost impossible to coax a smile out of her before May Day.

Jobs Unfinished

The news that the National Symphony is assured of a 1941-42 season will be welcome to all civic-minded Washingtonians as well as to all who love good music. But the spirit of "let George do it" is still at work. The Symphony's campaign for a sustaining fund is $2,800 short of the $107,600 goal, and the amount will have to be made up some way. Two other unfinished jobs remain to damage the District's reputation for complete generosity. The Community Fund, which sought $2,000,000 to perform services essential to the health and welfare of the city, has been pledged $1,950,147. Though the formal drive is long over, we are glad that pledges continue to trickle in. But if the total could be made up quickly, it would speed the works of mercy. The Police Boys Club asked $100,000 to continue benefits to less fortunate youths and to the community vitally interested in their sound development. So far, after an extension of the campaign, $86,000 has been subscribed. The leaders of the drive are confident they can get most of the remainder, but success depends largely on gifts between now and a final report meeting Friday. Let's finish these jobs, and not forget them amid the preoccupation with war relief funds.

Antipodean Call

Early this week an American naval squadron consisting of two light cruisers and four destroyers paid a good-will visit to the New Zealand port of Auckland. Yesterday another squadron of two heavy cruisers and five destroyers dropped anchor across the Tasman Sea at Sydney. In normal times such visits are regarded as routine and occasion little comment. It is only natural for warships to put in at a friendly port after a long cruise to give officers and men a chance to stretch their legs and enjoy some recreation. In existing circumstances, however, considerable political significance will be attached to the visit of American warships to New Zealand and Australia. Their arrival in the Antipodes at this time will emphasize the very strong bonds of friendship which exist between the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations at a moment when the Commonwealth is fighting for its existence. Nor will the presence in Australian and New Zealand waters of four American cruisers and nine destroyers be lost on the Japanese. Since the arrival at Singapore last month of a large contingent of Australian troops, tensions in the Pacific have eased somewhat. This may only be the lull before another storm, one that may possibly break out following Foreign Minister Matsuoka's visit to Moscow, Berlin and Rome. But the presence, temporary though it may be, of two squadrons of American warships in the South Pacific should tend to restrain any revival of the Japanese tendency to press down toward Singapore and the Dutch East Indies.

St. Lawrence Again

Arguments for and against the St. Lawrence waterway and power project have resounded through legislative halls of this country and Canada for many years. The project has its bitter opponents as well as its ardent supporters, including President Roosevelt. Estimates as to its final cost vary greatly and there is a still wider diversity of views as to what its economic worth to the Nation would be. In these circumstances many Congressmen as well as other citizens find it difficult to draw any final conclusion as to whether the project should someday be undertaken.

For the moment, however, the long-range value of the proposed seaway is overshadowed by the President's appeal for emergency action. He asks that this immense project be authorized as a defense measure. So the question that Congress will have to decide is not whether development of the St. Lawrence is ultimately desirable, but whether it should be started now as an essential part of our defense program. It is axiomatic that no large public improvements which do not contribute to the armament program should be begun at this time.

Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King of Canada asked the United States to reexamine the project carefully because of the "growing intensity of the war operations" and the obvious need for public expenditures on war requirements. President Roosevelt has replied that "the funds and man power required for the earliest possible completion of the St. Lawrence project could not be better spent for our joint defense effort, including aid to Great Britain." This argument rests largely upon two points: (1) President Roosevelt sees an "urgent need for the large increment in low-cost electric power which the St. Lawrence project will provide." (2) He believes that, with an outlet to the sea assured, expansion of shipbuilding facilities on the Great Lakes would be strategically and economically desirable.

Mr. Roosevelt speaks of completing the project in four years. Critics say it would require six. In any event, the diversion of labor and money into an undertaking that would not begin to produce power for defense industries until 1945 at best seems to be out of key with the President's do-it-now speech of last week. If there is really an emergency need for more power, it ought to be met without the risk of such delay. If there is no such emergency need, discussion of the whole project might well be postponed to calmer times.

The rather fantastic association of this project with current defense plans is not made more convincing by the argument that we need better-protected shipbuilding facilities on the Great Lakes. It is true that the range of bombers is increasing. Atlantic shipyards may be somewhat more vulnerable in the future. But the same would be true of the proposed seaway. Could the Government afford to build any large part of its fleet in inland ports where the ships might be blocked from the seas by a successful airplane attack on their only outlet? The feasibility of the project as a defense measure seems to be considerably more doubtful than its value as a peacetime undertaking.

Special Housing Need

Looking a year ahead, to the time when tens of thousands more Government workers will have poured into Washington, the President has approved a project to house a thousand girl clerks and stenographers who could not easily be sheltered in any other way. The single-room hotel recommended by the Defense Housing Coordinator is a type of building in which it has been hard to interest private enterprise. Moreover, by the time the accommodations are ready it is reasonable to expect that the 5,500 rooms for rent discovered by the WPA survey last month will have been exhausted. The central room registry set up by the defense organization already reports it cannot supply enough one-room-kitchen-and-bath apartments to meet the demand. Many of those seeking this kind of quarters would be the sort to fall back on rooming houses.

The dormitory project, like others recommended by the Housing Coordinator, is to meet a real and special need. Estimates which show no housing shortage here do not take account of the variety in requirements. One analyst has shown that if every bedroom were occupied by an average of one and a half persons, the metropolitan area could house slightly over a million. Even if we brush aside the fact that the population of the area at the last census was more than 964,000, distributing inhabitants on the basis of total bedrooms is out of the question. As The Post has pointed out before, almost no dwellings are available in certain lower price brackets on which a heavy demand will fall. When the Housing Coordinator recognizes a need, every encouragement should be given the agency he designates to build.

Victory For A. F. Of L.

The American Federation of Labor has won a complete victory before the Court of Appeals for the District for its contention that it has power to control the jurisdiction of its affiliates. Incidentally the higher court found that Judge T. Alan Goldsborough had no authority under the Norris-La Guardia Act to issue an injunction in this jurisdictional labor dispute. But the most significant part of the opinion is that which clarifies the right of the A. F. of L. to settle jurisdictional disputes within its own ranks and to modify the composition of local unions in accord with changing industrial conditions.

The dispute before the court grew out of the protracted fight between the Brewery Workers Union and the Teamsters Union. Both organizations have been members of the A. F. of L. for more than 40 years. In 1933 the executive council of the federation decided that truck drivers in the brewery industry belong in the Teamsters Union. Attempts to carry out that decision brought about violent conflicts between the two labor organizations.

Of course, the court did not attempt to say whether it is better to have the drivers of brewery trucks in an industrial union like that to which they have historically belonged or in a craft union like that to which the A. F. of L. transferred them. The decision rests upon the powers of the A. F. of L. to make such a transfer. The court found that under the A. F. of L. constitution affiliated unions must conform to the rules and regulations of the parent body. The council not only has power to require observance of these rules by affiliated unions; it may also change the rules to which obedience is required. If affiliated unions cannot tolerate such actions on the part of the A. F. of L., they may withdraw as the C. I. O. unions did.

Any other decision would have led to chaos. Probably the A. F. of L. was unwise in clinging to the rigid organizational structure which helped to bring about the C. I. O. split. Yet any central labor organization must have power to say where the jurisdiction of one affiliate begins and that of another ends. Jurisdictional strikes are all too common while that power exists. Without it interunion disputes, even among affiliates of a central body, might easily become intolerable. Now that the Court of Appeals has fully recognized this power, the A. F. of L. should lose no time in exercising it fully to prevent jurisdictional tie-ups within its own family.

Using Our Yards

No stress need any longer be laid on the fact that the greatest immediate threat to Great Britain is to be found in the mounting toll of shipping losses from which she is suffering. To meet the menace of the U-boats the British are employing every naval vessel they can spare in the convoy service. But many a convoy has been inadequately protected simply because there have not been enough warships to keep the submarines under control. That is why Secretary of the Navy Knox is now considering the transfer to Great Britain of a certain number of our light ships, such as submarine chasers, motor torpedo craft and converted yachts.

We can help in one other important way. Britain's shipyards are crowded. They are also subject to repeated pounding by the German luftwaffe, thus increasing the difficulty of rushing new construction and making repairs on damaged vessels. Britain's sea power can be substantially strengthened by making available the facilities of American yards for the repair of her ships. These facilities are, at the moment, largely occupied with the repair and conversion of American vessels. But it is believed that within a relatively brief period a certain amount of repair work on British account will be feasible. Arrangements to make that work possible ought to be made without delay.

SEEDS

Seeds are the still breath of God;
they suckle the milky sod

until they steal past mothering soil to grow from the hoe's toil.

They drink the sunlight through green lips and take the rain in tiny sips.

They are the voice of the Lord's Word struggling to be heard.

Seeds hold all the world in them and another world in their stem.

They creep upward through the ground's floor and with green fingers open the earthy door.

Democracy Day

With communism, fascism and nazism on the lips of everyone today, there is a great tendency, even among the most patriotic Americans, to overlook those tenets of government to which we subscribe and which are designed to insure and perpetuate the democratic form of government which mean so much to the futures of all of us who love the United States of America and everything for which it stands.

Democracy is an all-inclusive word which stands for very much—but the truth is that in our distress over what is happening elsewhere in the world we are too prone to forget that it is possible, even in this freedom-loving country, for our ideals and guarantees of freedom to be stolen from us. It is our duty to constantly remind ourselves that our Constitution is the last document of its kind still existent in the world.

With this in mind, permit me to suggest that one great way in which the people of the United States of America could be brought to a full realization of the importance of freedom and the constant attacks upon it would be to create a new national holiday to be known as Democracy Day. PHIL REGAN.
Beverley Hills, Calif., March 12.

After The War

We made the error once of abandoning world politics after intervention. The League of Nationists and Wilsonites were on the right track. If we go into the war further this time, let's do a good job by full participation in world affairs and power politics during and after this present conflict. Had we done so after the first war, we certainly could not blame anyone but ourselves for involvement in a second world war. Now we are about to be involved by the actions of other nations and by the inaction of ourselves. Why be inactive, especially when one is affected so vitally by the actions of others and when one is powerful, large, and full of bargaining powers? TWENTIETH CENTURY.
Washington, March 18.

Less "Gimme, Gimme"

Referring to your recent editorial, "Strikes vs. Defense," I would like to bring out the following points:

Labor unions are following the same old plan of asking for more wages. They have been crying "Gimme, Gimme" for years and are no better off, as the cost of living goes up as a result of higher wages paid out.

As this country is about the best one to live in for laborers as well as capitalists, labor should show its gratitude for the privilege of living in it by trying a little "giving" in place of "getting." A certain Scotchman once remarked that "the hole you get through is the hole you give through." If labor would test out this proverb by giving more, they might find themselves in a better position. Let every man, woman and child engaged in defense work give an hour a day free labor to his Government. This would go a long way toward preventing the Germans from making slaves of all of us, and it would also make the laborer feel that he was a definite and important part of our body politic. G. L. SMITH.
Washington, March 18.

Strike Solution

We are in the war. Our country must be defended.

By Presidential proclamation or by Congressional action, any man under 35 or 40 years of age, engaged in national defense work, who goes on strike, should be immediately inducted into the United States Army at $21 a month.

Any man, under present conditions, who has freedom to strike against his Government, which is trying to protect him, has too much freedom. W. H. BRAGG.
Gaithersburg, Md., March 18.

Highly Satisfied

I was much amused by the letter signed by Mrs. E. D. Cooksey, of Arlington, and I would like to add a few pertinent remarks on the subject.

I am an average American citizen who believes in paying for what I get as far as is humanly possible. I have not tried to fool myself into believing that I am not paying or rather going to pay for my due share of the Government's expense. Without stating any figures, which can always be made to lie, I can truthfully say that my taxes thus far have been insignificant in view of the degree of security my Government affords me.

In the days of '31 and '32 the country was passing through a critical phase. We have a tremendous debt to pay for as a result of the measures which were then adopted to keep us in line. Although I still have that debt to pay, my dollar will buy far more now than it would in 1932 when prices were considered so low. I am making more of those dollars, too.

Now, again without quoting any figures, I am of the opinion that I do not pay nearly enough taxes if I am to make a comparison with foreign governments. I would like Mrs. Cooksey to investigate for herself as to what the real facts are—that is wages of the American, less his taxes, plus his buying power vs. the corresponding items of Mr. Citizen of any foreign country in peacetimes. Then if she adds to that the material which each one possesses, what does she finally get?

What is she kicking about?
PAUL SIBOLD.

Of Smugness

Your editorial on the President's speech, in The Post of March 16, was a fine sequal to that speech. The two combined have placed the issue squarely before the people.

Mr. Pegler, in the same issue, is scarcely as happy when he stresses what he thinks is smugness in the so-called Anglo-Saxon elements in our training camps. Smug means precise, careful; but since certain observers thought persons who are careful in dress were self-conscious and self-complacent, the term "smug," in a slang sense, came to mean offensive self-importance. Is it not true that the man or people termed "smug" may be so only in the observer's mind? Wellington may have appeared smug to Napoleon, and the present Prime Minister of England may appear smug to Mussolini; but does anyone doubt where the consciousness of self-important and resulting smugness really lies? Mr. Pegler makes the common mistake of confounding democracy with something like Hungarian goulash. A mixture is not a compound. The unity of an army is in its oneness of spirit, not in its disregard of racial and similar differences. J. O. KNOTT.
Washington, March 17.

Nonaggression Pact

In a letter to The Post on March 7 F. G. Campbell complains: If Germany wins . . . the time ever comes when we have to refer to a hone as a rasiermesserstein, then we will surely know . . . that war is hell!

For a fearless red-blooded American, F. G. Campbell exhibits distressing evidence of linguistical pusillanimity.

What visions of horror the phrase in quotes would engender in the poor Berliner, who pronounces the six syllables of the ponderous "pusillanimity" with a mere two-syllable kleinmutl

Perhaps what's needed is a mutual nonaggression pact!
WM. HILLY.
Arlington, Va., March 8.

Function Of Nonresistance

With the lease-lend bill now passed, any remaining lack of unity on the part of this Nation is perhaps due in greater part to a widespread misunderstanding of the place of nonresistance in the moral world. There are moments in the lives of nearly every one of us when we feel definitely troubled as to whether it is better to use force against those who would destroy us through force, or to apply in absolute fashion the dictum, "Resist not evil, but overcome evil through good"—even though this might mean our sure and certain destruction as a Nation. By giving time to the understanding of this great problem, we can all pass beyond troublesome doubts and arrive at a singleness of purpose which must speed us greatly on our way to the victory for freedom upon which our every hope now hangs.

Let us realize, first of all, that it is the overcoming of evil which is aimed at, whether by means of resistance or nonresistance. Nonresistance takes its proper place, not as an end in itself but only as a part of the means, the tactics. There are times when nonresistance is the most effective tactic possible.

Contrariwise, there are times when any further demonstration of kindness spells a child, or an evildoer, or a nation bent upon the conquest of everything in sight. There are times when kindness proves in the end to be a cruel thing, encouraging evils which lie in the very heart of a man, or a nation. Life is not so simple that we can apply nonresistance eternally.

If our conscientious objectors placed themselves on record (before war appeared imminent) as being unwilling to fight anybody for anything, even to defend their property, wives and children against the most depraved of men, the events sure to follow such declaration would speedily awaken them to the logical fault of their beliefs. They would soon see that nonresistance is a relative and secondary principle, deeply rooted in the supreme principle of overcoming of all evil.

The whole thing is like the application of faith as a means for accomplishing things desirable; Undoubtedly faith can, and does, speed all healing, and is a real power in all life. Nevertheless broken bones require material aid. And some diseases are so profound that only a phenomenal faith can cure them.

While life is far from being as simple as our "peace at any price" brethren seem to believe, still, by endeavoring to understand life and the proper place therein for nonresistance, we do, indeed, simplify it exceedingly and find wholesome unity in our war efforts.
BOLLING SOMERVILLE.
Norwood, Va., March 18.

The Post Impressionist

We Are A Musician!

In these days of our dotage we recall with poignant clarity the harrowing tortures of our first piano lessons. There we were, perched high on the piano stool, our Buster Brown collar half choking us to death, the mountainous schoolmarm standing behind us, beating her feet into a state of insensibility. With her every cry of "one, two, three, four," our thoughts became more fixed on the baseball team awaiting our presence to start the game.

The truth is we gave not a hoot for G-majors and G-minors. We were more concerned about catching flies in right field or getting that runner on second base. The piano lessons were, in fact, downright criminal, so we thought, and we became resolved to emancipate ourselves from the persecutions of the music chamber. After two weeks the music teacher threw in the sponge. Mother, a talented musician, cried; father chuckled, and we got our freedom.

Ever since that period in a concentration camp (that is what it was to us) we have had a distinct horror of learning scales, beating time and, in general, acquiring a formal education in music. We are glad now, in our waning years, that we rebelled against standardized forms of music. We believe we are a better musician as a result of this insurrection.

We believe we are the best musician in the world. We believe that because we play our own music, disdaining the beauties of the Mozarts and the Chopins. This is not to assert that Mr. Mozart and Mr. Chopin did not have a lot on the ball. We believe they did. But, so far as we are concerned, we are better because we play for our own enjoyment and we play what comes into our head.

Our first opportunity to give play to our inherent musical genius came some ten months ago when, for a small monthly payment, we came into the possession of a piano. What prompted us to order the piano is still not quite clear. It is possible that, under the influence of too many scotches and sodas, we manifested our congenital belligerence and ordered the piano with that defiant air of "we'll show 'em."

We did show them, too, or at least we showed them to our satisfaction, which is all that counts. Today we cannot read a note, keep time, or play any of the standard works. We play our own compositions, about which we maintain strict secrecy. We feel that our musical outpourings are something personal, something too intimate for the public gaze.

Now, who were these big shots in the world of music? Who were these guys whose works form the basis of cruel and inhuman treatment to thousands of our children? That a child or a grown-up must submit to the frightful task of aping the "masters" is a piece of nonsense that should be eradicated forthwith.

There is music in all of us, including the gentry with tin ears. Music is as instinctive as the desire for food, and one of the chief reasons why the instinct is not more universally exhibited is the furious complex of music teachers to have us conform to the works of the "masters." The fact is, as any casual student of music can tell you, that many of the so-called masters were downright phonies.

We know nothing about music, as we have said. Yet, in our ignorance, we can detect curious similarities between the "masters" and those who preceded them along the musical paths. It is our belief that many of the scores of the better known operas were stolen, consciously or unconsciously, from the works of the great church writers of the Middle Ages, dating from Palestrina down through the ages.

For this reason, then, we consistently refuse to play the "masters," or to learn the scales which are the tools of good music. We fashion our own tools and while our productions are pretty awful to those who know music, they are good to us.

The point is that music today is something very attractive to us, with the result that scarcely a day passes that we do not play for an hour. This may be painful to the neighbors, on occasions, but usually we manage to play when they are out, and we always play softly so that our "masterpieces" are hardly audible outside the room.

Our daughter Connie, now 7, is asking for a piano. We are timorous about granting the request. We wonder if her first experiences with music teachers will prove as painful to her as it did to us and if she will become fed up with it at the start. That would be the worst thing a father could do to a daughter he loves. Maybe Connie would be happier banging at the piano without the aid of scales and all that sort of rubbish. I wonder.

EUGENE KELLY.

Posting The Books"

Heroes And Hero-Worship

THE DIFFERENCE, they say, between a god and a hero is one of degree rather than of kind. A hero is one who, because of his actual deeds during life and through the accretion of myths about his memory after death, acquires a quasi-divinity. More than one god, no doubt, began modestly by being a hero, and most heroes began by being merely men. Hero-worship, then, is an expression of the religious impulse; hence it is universal and ineradicable and difficult to keep on this side idolatry.

LALLEY

What sort of fellows Heracles, Romulus, Sigfried, Arthur, Roland, Robin Hood and Finn MacCool may have been in their own day we can of course only conjecture. We may even conjecture that none of them ever existed but were invented, according to a well-known process called anthropomorphosis, to personify the emotional experiences of men in their encounters with the natural universe. Thus a learned and witty Frenchman was able, about the middle of the nineteenth century, to prove that Napoleon I, so far from being an historical personage, was, as the very name suggests, merely another variety of sun god.

Happily, most of our great American heroes are indubitably historical and it is still possible to divorce them to some extent from the myths that have gathered about them. It has been done for them separately by various conscientious hagiographers, but now Mr. Dixon Wecter has done it for the whole pantheon in a single admirably organized but in some ways rather unsatisfying work. The fascination of his book is in the insight it gives not only into the national ethos, of which these myths are the truest expression, but also into the processes of myth-making as they have operated, not in dim prehistoric fogs, but in the bright sunlight of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

HOWEVER, our folk heroes differ in some rather curious aspects from most of the legendary or historic heroes of other times and places. Those who, like Paul Bunyan, come wholly from the realm of Faerie cannot, like for example Sir Gawain, be immediately identified by the professors with any of the familiar nature myths. As to our historical heroes we are forced in the absence of saints to make them do, as it were, double duty. Not indeed that we demand or even desire any great spirituality in them, but we do demand a personal moral rectitude. Though we like our heroes to have a touch of the romantic, we tolerate no such romantic frailty as Launcelot's or Lord Nelson's. This sort of frailty is quite enough to deny Hamilton admission in his own right to the inner sanctuary of the pantheon, though, of course, he may enter in his capacity of Founding Father.

Our national hero myths are expressive, as Mr. Wecter shows, of the almost wholly abstract nature of American patriotism and of the rootless nature of our social organization. Anyway, the sense of the native soil, as such, does not seem to be among the congeries of emotions evoked by our patriotic symbols and talismanic words. Thus, though we have tutelary spirits to keep watch over our political institutions and even our "way of life," we have none of those intimate genii of the hearth, the household, the fields and the forests, beloved of settled and stratified peoples.

Another peculiarity of our hero-mythology is the total absence in what many foreigners consider a matriarchal society of any great heroines. We have no such figure as a Boadicea or a St. Joan, and certainly no such legend as that of St. Ursula. Mr. Wecter explains this paradox with much self-confidence, but still, I think, rather unconvincingly, by saying it is impossible, even in Hollywood, to be at once a heroine and a perfect lady.

AT THE SAME time, the matriarchal idea, as Mr. Wecter abundantly shows, finds full expression in the cult of the hero's mother, though our author seems to consider it rather an outcropping of suppressed Mariolatry among a Protestant people. The hero is expected to declare that he owes all to his angel mother; that whatever he may have of wisdom or virtue was learned at her knee. If he forgets or declines to repeat this formulary it is subsequently put into his mouth by the myth-makers. In the case of a living hero a too conspicuous absence of the umbilical cord may lead to embarrassment on all sides and to ultimate disenchantment in the hero worshipers, as one relatively recent instance seems to illustrate.

As in all mythologies, signs and portents attend the birth of the hero. Childish prodigies of skill, labor or wisdom of chivalry give earnest of great destiny, as with the strangling of the serpents by the infant Heracles. The greater of course the obscurity of the hero's early years, the freer the play of fancy about them, and the more poetic the myth, the more likely it is to endure. The fables of Parson Weems about Washington, being purely moralistic, seem more likely to perish than the folk fables of the early life of Lincoln in Indiana and Illinois.

This, in part, may explain why Lincoln rather than Washington is now the greatest of our folk heroes—the one whom myth has lifted nearest to actual divinity. But every myth must develop within some framework of truth, and the frame is shaped by the hero's character and by the chance or predestined currents of history. Thus the pattern of Lincoln's life, says Mr. Wecter, "was fixed long ago in the tender, familiar contours of the Christ story . . . Out of the stuff of human nature, by the imagination of Americans and the world at large a Lincoln has been hewn, who is free from time and space and every other limitation. Lincoln, the epic, one of the finest pieces of folk poetry thus becomes a universal."

MR. WECTER, takes as his point of departure for this book the famous essays of Carlyle. Carlyle exalted hero-leadership, as epitomized in Cromwell, at the expense of the democratic idea. But Mr. Wecter has undertaken to show, and I think has succeeded in showing, that a democracy engenders a more ardent form of hero worship and a more admirable constellation of heroes than the fuehrerprinzip under any guise. And it is strange that he did not go on to say that whereas the doctrine that the living hero can do no wrong is capable of working great mischief in the world this cannot be said of the hero who is posthumously invested with infallibility.

Moreover, with one or two exceptions, and these not of the first rank, Mr. Wecter finds our American heroes worthy of their worship. It is a grandeur of personality rather than momentousness of deeds that we look for in them; steadfastness counts more than intellect, magnanimity for more than brilliance. Of course, since we are a Nation of pragmatists, we ask our heroes to be successful in the practical sense. We do not after the fashion of the Irish and the Poles worship great-hearted failures. Not even Lee falls into that category, though somehow Lee, the "very parfit gentle knight," seems more in the tradition of European chivalry than in any of our own.

The power that our hero-myths exert upon our emotions, thoughts and loyalties is shown in the efforts of the worshipers of alien gods to steal ours from us, as Artemis was stolen from Tauris by Orestes. Thus the Marxists have tried to take over Lincoln and the Bundists, Washington. It seems to prove that America is still in its heroic age, or has but lately emerged from it.

Perhaps it is as well that this is so. For, as Mr. Wecter truly says, "the nation that cannot evoke the spirit of its dead heroes, and the birth of new ones in a time of crisis, is doomed."

The New Agency

By Ernest K. Lindley

Supermediation Board

THE SUPERMEDIATION Board is made up of men of experience and breadth of view. It will have prestige. Its success supposes that the great majority of employers and workers put defense first, and that the minorities who do not can be kept in line by public opinion.

The new agency will lift a heavy load from the shoulders of William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman. They also have prestige. They also could bring the force of public opinion to bear on troublesome situations. But the volume of business of this sort was swamping them.

They will now be freed to concentrate on the other problems of speeding up and expanding production, for which they are jointly responsible. Hillman, it should not be forgotten, is in charge of the recruiting and training of labor, in itself an immense and complicated task. Now that most of the big producers are loaded with defense contracts, Knudsen must concentrate more on getting smaller producers into action, chiefly through subcontracting. The next several billion dollars' worth of orders, now just coming up, will be harder to place than the first were. Every day new bottlenecks are appearing, as the combined U. S.-British program is expanded.

Hillman has held from the first that the great bulk of labor was earnestly in favor of the great defense effort and would meet management halfway in the peaceful settlement of disputes. He has contended all along that most strikes could be averted if the Government could get conciliators or mediators to work in time.

Hillman's contention is supported by the record of his division and of the Department of Labor Conciliation Service, under Dr. John R. Steelman. Compared to normal times, man-hours of work lost in strikes have been extremely low for eight months. The curve has started up in the last few weeks, but the overall figures are still low.

THE DEFENSE effort has reached a level, however, where every hour and every minute counts. A strike involving relatively few workers at a bottleneck means delay in production all along the line. At present there are about 30 strikes in plants having Army contracts. Altogether only a few thousand workers are involved directly, but the consequences are serious. At least as many more strikes impend at other key points.

There are three kinds of strikes.

With the first, jurisdictional strikes, the public and the Government have long since lost patience. They are bad enough in times of peace. At present they are intolerable. Most of the men at the top of the A. F. of L. seem to have realized this. Nothing is more likely to engender anti-union legislation than the continuation of jurisdictional strikes.

Strikes of the second kind—for organization purposes—usually are the fault of an employer who still refuses to recognize that collective bargaining is the law of the land. There are exceptions, of course, in which unions representing minorities start strikes with the hope of winning recruits and a contract with the employer. If employers had not wasted so much energy fighting the National Labor Relations Act, nearly all industry by now probably would have been well past the stage of organizational strikes. These are the growing pains of collective bargaining. But until Bethlehem Steel, Ford, and other holdouts bargain collectively with bonafide labor unions, organizational strikes will remain a threat.

Strikes of the third class are called to force higher wages and other improvements in working conditions. Up to now most of these have been averted by compromise. But some employers have now had their labor costs pushed up to the point where they cannot, or are unwilling to, make further concessions. The negotiations between the United Mine Workers and Appalachian operators, and between the steel workers and United States Steel, are the biggest now under way in which collective bargaining already is the practice and the terms of the contracts to be signed are the only sources of dispute.

THE NEW MEDIATION board mobilizes all branches of labor. The C. I. O. was opposed to the idea, but could not fail to support it when called upon to do so by the White House.

The three public representatives are known as men of liberal outlook, committed to the general principles of collective bargaining. The four employer representatives, likewise, are men of excellent reputation.

There is some under-cover grousing among employer organizations because they were not consulted by the President in the choice of the employer representatives on the board. The chief reason is that the large employer organizations—the National Association of Manufacturers and the United States Chamber of Commerce—are too much tainted with opposition to unionism. Mediation must proceed on the basis of the law, which includes protection of the right to organize and to bargain collectively.

If the board is to be thoroughly effective, all of its members must look upon themselves as representatives of the public first. And by his selections it is plain that a board of that outlook is what the President tried to create.

Yugoslavia's Choice

By Andre Visson

Reactions To Nazi Demands

IT WAS ON the eve of Munich. I arrived at Belgrade from Bledidyllic, resort in the Slovenian Alps where the Little Entente had just been interred.

The tragic face of Camille Krofta, the old, tired foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, then rapidly approaching the precipice, was still vivid in my mind. I could still hear the voice of Milan Stoyadinovitch, then Yugoslavia's premier, saying to me: "There is nothing to be done; the British and the French will not fight for the Czechs, and I am afraid the Czechs will not fight either . . ."

The air was charged with anxiety. Was the war to break out that fall? Would the Yugoslavs fight?

That night, in one of these Belgrade "kafanas" where the Tzigane music seems to make the Turkish coffee, hotter and the iced drinks colder, I discussed the situation with a few young Serbian friends, most of whom were officers.

They were all of a unanimous opinion. "If the Czechs will fight the Germans, we do not care whether we have or have not any obligations toward the Czechs. We will fight!"

A year later, in August, 1939, I was again in Belgrade, asking the same question: "Will you fight this fall?"

"No," was the answer of the Yugoslav leaders. "We will not fight unless we are attacked. And we do not believe we will be attacked."

And my young Serbian friends answered me: "You, who lived in our country, you, who know our language and our history, you, who can speak not only to our intellectuals, but to our peasants, you will not insult us by your doubts at our intention to resist any aggression and to defend our freedom, even if all odds were against us."

I NEVER doubted it, indeed, and so I have viewed with a certain skepticism these last weeks the dispatches from Belgrade—and particularly from Sofia and Budapest—announcing Yugoslavia's complete capitulation.

The Yugoslav foreign policy has been—and still is—inspired by a passionate desire to preserve peace. I know, however, that this policy could not ignore Old Serbia's traditions. I know that there are certain things which one cannot obtain from a Serb.

The Serbs learned from the Turks, who were their masters during five centuries, the art of delaying, negotiating, maneuvering. But this nation of peasants and warriors kept through all these centuries its fighting spirit and was proud of having betrayed nobody during its tragic and bloody history.

It seemed to me quite impossible that 20 years of prosperity—from 1919 to 1939—had emasculated the viril character of the Serbs.

Some foreign observers mistrusted Prince Paul. Of course, Prince Paul does not have the military background of his cousin, King Alexander, whom Yugoslavia's foes had assassinated in October, 1934, at Marseille.

Prince Paul is one of the most cultivated of European rulers. He is an esthete who founded in Belgrade the finest art museum in the Balkans. His private collection contains some of the best El Greco and Rubens paintings I have ever seen. He spends two hours every day at his piano in the White Palace at Dedigne. His mother—whom he did not know, for she died when he was a child—was a Russian noble lady, Princess Aurore Demidoff. He had been brought up at Oxford, with the Duke of York and Duke of Kent as fellow students. A few years ago the Duke of Kent became Prince Paul's brother-in-law by marrying Princess Marina of Greece.

But despite all his Occidental background, he belongs to the Karageorgevitch, the Yugoslav national dynasty—the only national dynasty in the Balkans—which had been so proud of having maintained the blood ties with the Serbian peasants of Sumadia Province.

His greatest ambition is to hand over to his young nephew, who will be 18 years old this autumn, the Kingdom of Yugoslavia whole and in peace. To realize this ambition he is prepared to make any sacrifices. It is, however, absolutely impossible for him to betray his family's traditions, to dishonor both his family and his country.

A nonaggression pact with Germany? Or even a pact of eternal friendship? As long as Hitler is prepared to accept it, why not? How does it change the existing situation?

But to open the Yugoslav borders to let the Nazi forces attack Greece? It is an impossible thing for a Serb, particularly when he is a Karageorgevitch.

And it is also hardly possible for Yugoslavia's foreign minister, Alexander Cincar Markovitch, who might have been impressed by Hitler's military machine during his sojourn as Yugoslav Minister in Germany, but who comes from a Serbian military family and whose wife, moreover, is a Greek from the island of Corfu.

WHAT ARE THE other factors which may help decide Yugoslavia's fate?

There is the army. The war minister, Gen. Peter Pechitch, who is 70 years old, proved to be a fairly poor diplomat both in Prague and in Brussels. Because of his age some people consider him a "Yugoslav Petain." But I have been told by military experts that he is still supposed to be one of Yugoslavia's best strategists, and besides this he is not the only man to speak for the army. The chief of the general staff, Gen. Petar Kositch, and particularly the 46-year-old Gen. Dushan Simovitch, air force commander, are men who have maintained Serbian fighting spirit.

When the Croatians fell out with the Serbs, one of their grievances was that they had not received commanding posts in the army and in the diplomatic service in proportion with their numbers.

It is only too natural that the old Croatians were vexed. Today, however, the Serbs are assured against any possible, unconscious failure.

It would be quite erroneous to suppose that the Croatian leader, Dr. Vladimir Matchek, who is Yugoslavia's vice premier, is pro-German and particularly pro-Nazi. A convinced democrat, he hates totalitarian regimes. A lawyer from Zagreb, he does not possess the fighting spirit of the Serbian generals. He agrees, however, with them on the unwisdom of opening Yugoslav borders to the Nazi forces.

Moreover, in these crisis days, the solidarity of the Yugoslavs revealed itself much stronger than it was supposed by many foreign observers.

The Croatians and the Serbs have quarreled for fifteen years regarding the way to administer their country. But they agree completely on the necessity of defending Yugoslavia's freedom and independence.

ANTE PAVELITCH, leader of a small Croatian minority "Frankovci," hardly reaching 5 per cent of all the Croatians, who is living in Italy, would be delighted to become the Croatian Quisling. But he would not have more followers than has the Quisling of Norway.

The most influential Yugoslav "appeaser" was Msgr. Anton Koroshetz, leader of the Slovene Catholic Party. He had no sympathies for the Nazi Reich. But accustomed to maneuver successfully during 30 years in the Vienna Parliament, he believed that he would be able to maneuver with no less success by playing the Italians against the Germans, utilizing all his Vatican contacts.

Koroshetz died three months ago and the Yugoslav "appeasers" lost their most influential leader.

Public opinion of the Yugoslav people, both in Yugoslavia and abroad, has made itself felt. The Serbian, Croatian and Slovenian unions in the United States cabled to Prince Paul and Dr. Matchek, urging them to resist all German claims. The bans—governors of the Yugoslav provinces—have sounded the same note from their districts. Croatians and Slovenes, as well as Serbs, are encouraging the Yugoslav leaders to resist.

Today Hitler has no more doubt about Yugoslavia's attitude. That country will not adhere to the Axis alliance and will not open its borders as did Bulgaria, which was seduced by the revisionistic mirage.

Today Hitler has only the alternative of accepting a nonaggression and friendship pact, which would be for him a diplomatic setback for which the Yugoslavs will be punished as soon as—and if—he will be able to crush Greece, or to face the creation of the Balkan front, composed of Greeks, Yugoslavs and Turks, backed and assisted by the British forces and equipped with American material.

Fair Enough

Learning Your Army

THIS IS GOING to hurt me more than you, because I have to study it out and write it, whereas you don't even have to read it. It is a sort of lesson on the composition of the new American Army, which is very unlike the World War model. An easy topic, says you, but you wait.

Of course, we know the War Department is the boss of the whole institution, with the Secretary of War representing the stockholders and with Gen. George Marshall, the Chief of Staff, serving as the superintendent of the plant.

Then there are the large corps areas into which the whole country is divided, and I mention them only to get them out of the way, because for the purpose of the lesson, they are a nuisance. The corps area, in its relation to the training and fighting Army, can be compared with a hotel. It is an administrative and housekeeping organization, and the armies which are concerned with the fighting can be moved from one corps area to another as a ball club on the road moves from one hotel to another, leaving their laundry to be sent on, you might say, and not having to pick up after them.

In the combat department there are four field armies now making, and a field army may be composed of as many as three army corps, which, in turn, are composed of three or more divisions each. The commanders of the field Armies are Generals Hugh Drum at Governors Island, N. Y.; Ben Lear at Memphis, Herbert Brees at San Antonio and John L. De Witt at San Francisco. It would seem advisable to read up on these men, only one of whom, Hugh Drum, is fairly well known, and he only by name, because the next generation may be putting up monuments to one or more or all of them or wishing they had never been heard of.

I SAID THE army corps—and, for the last time, now, don't get the army corps mixed up with the corps areas—are composed of three or more divisions each, but, like some beautiful, stately hymn in the vandal hands of a hopped-up swing band, this plan is subject to variations which throw it out of symmetry. Some of the corps have only two divisions, one has four, and Gen. Lear's Field Army has only one organized corps and has two additional divisions of infantry, one of horse cavalry and an armored division scattered over the central part of the country. The armored division, which is expanding into a corps of its own, will be a separate outfit under Gen. Adna Chaffee, the best man we have in this line of work, subject to the direct orders of the high command in Washington.

Our new Infantry division, called a triangular division, has three regiments and has about 12,000 soldiers, as compared with the ponderous, heavy-hitting main-strength divisions of the World War, which had about 27,000 men. The new idea is to eliminate the artillery regiment and brigade entirely and attach a battalion of artillery to each regiment of infantry. Under this plan the infantry commander has his cannon along with him, if you get the idea, and thus doesn't have to find the artillery and defer to the rank and judgment of the artillery colonel and brigadier when he wants some guns to knock over a swarm of tanks. But we still maintain a lot of square divisions made up of National Guard troops, which are not as large as World War divisions but retain most of the very defects of organization which the triangular division is intended to smooth away.

WHY WE ARE keeping this clumsy form I haven't been able to learn, except that it is said, in a rather sneering way, that the idea is to provide the rank of brigadier for a lot of civilian soldiers.

But that still doesn't explain it, because at Fort Bragg we have a triangular streamlined division, the Ninth, which, nevertheless, has two brigadiers—Edwin Harding and R. E. D. Hoyle—under Maj. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, the division commander, supervising the Infantry and Artillery, respectively. But they are brigadiers just the same, and the triangular form hasn't eliminated their jobs. So, if the idea is simplicity, how come we to maintain the most complicated form in the National Guard outfits whose generals, it stands to reason, will be less skillful than the professionals?

This is complex, I know, and there is a lot more of it. But we all have a fair working knowledge of our form of Government from the White House down to the town hall, and we had better do some cramming on the parallel form of the Army. It is going to be important to all of us from now on.

When The War Ends

By Barnet Nover

America And The Future

THE CLAMOROUS demands voiced in some quarters recently for a specific statement of war aims by the belligerents have now very largely subsided. There was never much point to them anyway. The clamor was partly a deliberate ruse to create confusion and dissension in our midst so as to prevent or delay the program of all-out aid to Britain, partly the product of an utter misunderstanding of what the war is all about.

NOVER

Nobody really has to ask what Hitler's war aims are. They are inherent in the ghastly situation which he, more than anyone else, has been responsible for bringing into being. They are the obvious projection of the course he has followed during the past eight years, a period which has seen his armies overrun a dozen countries. And as for British war aims, as long as that country is fighting for her life she can have only one overshadowing aim in mind—to overcome the menace that threatens to stifle her national existence.

SHOULD THE TIDE of war definitely begin to run in Britain's favor the situation would, of course, be different. But even then the nature of that country's war aims would depend to a very real degree on the future world role of the United States.

To take a long look back. Suppose at the time of Woodrow Wilson's arrival in Paris, 21 years ago, he had announced that the United States would under no circumstances underwrite any peace treaty, any arrangement for collective action against a future aggressor, any step in the direction of international cooperation. Would the peace treaty of 1919 have been different from what it turned out to be?

The answer must obviously be in the affirmative. Under such circumstances it is most unlikely that France, for instance, would have been content with anything less than the cession to her of the entire left bank of the Rhine and even more punitive restrictions on Germany than those actually imposed. It was because of the implicit belief by all the participants at the Paris conference that the United States would help regulate the peace that prevented far worse evils from being incorporated into the Versailles Treaty than those that actually found their way into that much-abused document. Recent studies of what happened at the peace conference make it clear that Wilson rendered yeoman service in the direction of moderation. He could only do so because it was assumed that he would not be repudiated by the Nation in whose name he spoke.

THE REFUSAL of the United States to follow up its military victory by constructive political action in the international sphere created a vacuum which our associates in the war never were able to fill by their own efforts. Their very attempts to do so, first through such strong measures as the occupation of the Ruhr, later through a policy of appeasement, made a bad situation worse. The ultimate consequence was disaster.

Now we are engaged in a great effort in which our vast industrial resources are to be mobilized on behalf of the nations fighting aggression. We shall be called upon, as the President has pointed out, to make increasing sacrifices. We cannot ignore the dangers of the course upon which we are embarked, although they are, in all likelihood, much less than the dangers that might arise from a policy of inaction and indifference. But despite the all-absorbing crisis of the moment we must begin to think of the world which is to emerge from the war and, equally, of our role in that world.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT obviously has that in mind. In his address of last Saturday night, after having stated that "our country is going to play its full part," he added: "And when dictatorships disintegrate . . . then our country must continue to play its great part in the period of world reconstruction."

Twenty years ago we left the job half done. The consequence was chaos and ultimately catastrophe, from which the whole world is now suffering bitterly. We cannot afford to repeat that mistake. We realize now as we have never done before the impact of world developments upon us. We cannot, once the present menace is overcome, trust again to the blind forces of chance, to the oceans that have shrunk, to wishful thinking and illusions based on a false reading of history to save us. We must play the part which size and power and destiny have thrust upon us.

The world has shrunk as civilization has spread. In the nineteenth century the great powers were all European powers. It was possible then to maintain a precarious balance on that continent. The twentieth century has seen the rise of new centers of power, one in the Far East, one in this hemisphere. Our role is bound to be one fraught with great responsibilities and equally great opportunities. When peace returns, we can shirk that role only to our own and the world's undoing. In time of war we must begin to prepare for peace.

Six Army Airmen 'Bail Out,' 2 Stay, Land Plane Safely

Fort Bragg, N. C., March 20 (AP).—Six Army airmen from Langley Field, Va., took to their parachutes—for five of them it was the first time they had ever jumped—when their big four-motored bomber lost its elevator near here today. Two others stayed with the ship and landed it on Pope Field with little damage.

Lieut. Col. Harold Lee George, in command of the bomber which was en route to Miami, Fla., gave the order to bail out after a jammed cable caused the accident to the elevator. He and Maj. Donald R. Lyon, copilot, took the chance of bringing the big plane down.

All of the six who leaped landed without harm. Lieut. C. W. Eur, who had never used a parachute before, said: "The sensation was rather pleasing. There was little shock upon striking the earth."

Besides Eur, those who jumped were Lieut. D. A. Hornsby, Technical Sergt. A. R. Jester, Staff Sergt. T. E. Snyder, Staff Sergt. J. H. Walsh, and Staff Sergt. R. S. Nephew.

W.C.T.U. Head Pleased With Army Morals

Chicago, March 20 (AP).—Officers and men of the United States Army can step up and take a bow—in recognition of praise from the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Said Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, president of the organization:

"They're fine. And we can in all sincerity praise the Army's effort to keep them that way. Unquestionably our soldiers are the cleanest in the world today."

Mrs. Smith urged that Congress ban all liquor from Army camp areas.

Four Witnesses Say Two Policemen Beat Colored Man

Four witnesses in the District Court yesterday identified Patrolmen Henry J. Martin and James E. Stabler, of the Third Precinct, as the officers who beat a colored man in the Foggy Bottom section last Labor Day night.

Luther Sockwell, 37, colored, 815½ S Street Northwest, told a jury before Justice James W. Morris that the officers attacked him without provocation. Abner Lewis, 522 Twenty-third Street Northwest, and three others corroborated Stockwell's story.

Assistant District Attorney Allen J. Krouse rested the Government's case late yesterday. Defense testimony will begin today.

The policemen are accused in eight other indictments of attacks on colored persons. They have been suspended since complaints were filed against them.

Plowshares Rust in Caroline; Farmers Expect Army Invasion

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Bowling Green, Va., March 20.—The rich farming land to the east of here is untended now in a strange holiday of suspense.

The farmers are asking their families, and friends at the crossroads stores, one question: What will happen to us and our historic county if the Army acquires a third of its land for the proving ground?

Everyone asks everyone else what he has heard of it and meanwhile the rich ground, ripe for the spring ploughing, isn't worked.

Several months ago the rumor spread that a new army was coming to maneuver on the same land Jeb Stuart rode so often, guarding Richmond. The rumors took shape when Army officers began driving stakes and making notations in little notebooks.

Then this week the local newspaper received a map describing "the area" the Army required for a gigantic maneuvering ground. And it announced that "the area" was a desirable one.

"It's a Funny Looking Sight"

"There's no use of sticking a plough in it if everybody will be moved off soon. So everybody's stopped still. It's a funny looking sight," said L. T. Kay, jr. He is the manager of the Caroline County Sweet Potato Association, Inc., largest of three such cooperatives in the area wanted by the Army.

He would be one of the county's 13,945 citizens affected and, as he said, "anxious to know what's going to be done."

Some don't want to say anything publicly because, as Commonwealth's Attorney Bernard Mahon emphasized, the element of patriotism is involved. And, on the basis of those who did talk, the attitude fairly can be summed up:

If we're approached simply on the grounds of patriotism they can take the land, and gladly. But if this is offered as a business proposition, it's a bad one for us.

Bowling Green is probably more apprehensive than the approximately 4,500 citizens of the section everyone here now calls "the area." Its business leaders, many saying "don't quote me because I don't want to seem unpatriotic," emphasize that the village is solely dependent on agriculture for its business life and peculiarly dependent on "the area," the county's richest.

Little Emotionalism

The town is not included in the Army's plan and the talk by its citizens is mostly of their future commercial stake. Few see how thousands of nearby soldiers could benefit the town, since the Army buys its stocks elsewhere. There is little emotionalism in the speculations.

But out in "the area" there is wonderment and shock. A businessman in Bowling Green described the farmers as "depressed and excited." A county official said that in prospect lies an evacuation such as European communities have known.

So the question that Farmer George Taylor, of Mica, and others talked about today was "where will we go if we are evacuated?"

BERNARD MAHON
Commonwealth Attorney

What they will leave behind is apparent and a detailed inventory is being taken now by some of the leading citizens. There are extensive lines recently installed by the Rural Electrification Administration; 110,000 acres, some worth $100 an acre, most of it poorer; five brick churches, each worth $15,000 or more; at least three grade schools and land which has a sentimental value, too; some families—as in the case of Mrs. Gordon Conway—inherited it from royal grant.

"Where Will We Go?"

However, most of them don't talk of probable compensation. It is "where will we go to live?" Mahon pointed out that some good land is available in the county but is limited in quantity. And as Kay pointed out, perhaps the majority of the farmers have specialized in their peculiar type of soil, a sandy loam that crumples in the hand and produces abundantly the paying Nancy Hall variety of sweet potato—of which 75,000 bushels are averaged annually in "the area."

"Everyone would have to learn a whole new way of farming, even if they moved somewhere else in the county," because the soil isn't consistent, Taylor pointed out. And probably confront a land boom where they try to move, as Kay said.

But both kept hammering: "If the Government needs our land it can have it. We just want to know what it's going to do so we'll know what plans to make."

Elsewhere, again, the talk took this shape:

"Here are our objections—we hate to leave home; we've got livestock that would have to be transplanted in different environment; it would cut off probably a third of the $63,000 in land levies if all the evacuated people left the county—and those remaining would pay more taxes if public facilities and institutions are maintained on the accustomed level. Then, many rural merchants in "the area" would have to establish businesses elsewhere.

Two Shrines May Go

Definitely gone from their bailiwick, some thought to say, would be two places, one a shrine—the house in Guinea Station where Stonewall Jackson died and the old Garrett farm, where John Wilkes Boothe, Lincoln's assassin, was shot to death.

No one would venture to say the percentage of citizens in favor of the Army's plan. One group of farmers, talking of it in front of a Bowling Green store, said, "It's just like in everything else. Those who figure to gain by it think it's fine. Those who don't know where their next home will be still want to help their country but wish it didn't have to happen here."

Soldiers' Dance . . .

The annual dinner dance which has become a tradition at former Gov. Pinchot's big brick house, 1617 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, was staged last night in honor of the boys at Fort Meade.

The house, which is home for 65 of Uncle Sam's girl workers in Washington, vibrated with swing tunes and the shuffle of dancing feet. Twenty-five men from the Headquarters Company, 1302d Service Unit at Fort Meade, attended. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Crook, who operate the residence as a rooming house, were host and hostess.

The 'Mysterious' Emissary of Secretary Knox

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The army of Adolf Hitler, William Joseph Donovan said, can make mistakes just like any other army.

In weighing the probable power of what is admittedly the most formidable military force in the world, you can go just as far wrong by overtestimating its strength, he said, as by underestimating it.

"They (the Germans) are, after all, human."

After two days of trying, The Post yesterday caught up with Col. Donovan, found him in his law office in the Bowen Building at the day's end, and, it is necessary to report, came away pretty much with its hands empty.

What the 58-year-old colonel learned as unofficial observer in Europe for Secretary of the Navy Knox in the last four months is for official ears only. He is saving conclusions, drawn from the facts, for a radio broadcast.

To Knox and Secretary Stimson and the Army and Navy high command he has reported what he heard in talks with the military and political leaders of 17 countries of Europe and the Near East and what he saw of the fortunes of war in some 30,000 miles of travel.

The job of reporting has involved a rush of appointments on nearly a dawn to dawn schedule for two days.

They call the colonel "Wild Bill," but there was nothing about him that was wild yesterday. Although there's no overlooking the Irish set of his jaw and the vitality that glows in his face, his blue eyes speak kindness, and he has a soft, well mannered way of talking.

He looks, in a word, the scholarly lawyer of his reputation. He was reminded of his profession yesterday when Donovan, Leisure, Newton and Lombard assigned him a Supreme Court case. It was a fine welcome home, he said.

But how did the colonel acquire such a name as "Wild Bill?" And why does such a mild man as this go wandering about the world "visiting wars?"

If you are inclined to think it far-fetched to say that the pattern of the man in the years since the Armistice has been largely shaped by the 21 months he spent fighting in France—when he really was "wild"—consider for a moment his activities since he left last December as the "mysterious" emissary of Secretary Knox. Then consider these words in the citation of the only man in the A. E. F. to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Distinguished Service Cross and the Distinguished Service Medal:

". . . he encouraged all near him by his example, moving among his men in exposed positions, reorganizing decimated platoons and accompanying them forward in attacks . . ."

The World War made "Wild Bill" Donovan a soldier. And that's what he has never ceased to be. The law is his profession, but his avocation is soldiering. He spends his vacations at it, just as the average man golfs.

Four years before the World War, Col. Donovan knew there would be a fight and that America would be in it. He enlisted. He devoted his evenings and his vacations to the study of war. He trained for war just as in his younger days he trained for boxing bouts.

In 1916 he went to the Mexican border with Troop I, New York Cavalry, of which he was captain. He went to France with the 165th Infantry, New York City's famous old "Fighting Sixty-ninth." He was wounded three times in battle and so conducted himself that men called him a "personal phenomenon" and then shortened it to "Wild Bill," remembering that he led his troops in the Argonne with the words:

"They can't get me and they won't get you."

After the Armistice, Col. Donovan went into Siberia for more fighting. Back in America he learned more about war at the general staff school.

The world gave the soldier a chance for a time to put to work the law degree he got at Columbia University in 1907. But Col. Donovan knew that Europe used armies as means for promulgating political ideologies, so he was ready when the Italians moved against Abyssinia. He also was on hand to watch the civil war in Spain, knowing that both in Africa and on the Spanish peninsula the leaders of Europe were merely warming up their teams for the main go.

It is safe to say that "Wild Bill" Donovan would have tried to go all the way to Cairo whether or not he was sent by Secretary Knox who calls him "the greatest civilian officer developed in the World War."

England, said Col. Donovan yesterday, is much like a boxer who knows his opponent for a 20-round bout can fight at top speed for only 10 rounds. He knows that his job is to stay with his man for 10 rounds and save enough of his own stamina for the knockout. The danger is, he said, that he may exhaust himself in defense.

Wheeler Urges Safeguards On U. S. Peace

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, last night called upon those who opposed passage of the British aid bill to give "continued support in a crusade against war."

"Continue the fight, not against the bill—now a law—but against war and against every step which gives dictatorial powers to the President," he urged in an address prepared for an N. B. C. broadcast.

"All-out aid for England, Greece and China means all-in war for the United States."

Legislators who stood with Wheeler in the unsuccessful fight against the British aid measure said his speech was a reply to President Roosevelt's address last Saturday in which the Chief Executive called for "total effort" to assure "total defeat" of the Axis.

He referred directly to the President's address several times, and at one point said that "to many of us, the President's recent speech carried dark forebodings for the future of the republic."

"During the 1940 Presidential campaign," he said, "it was all aid 'short of war'—now it is 'all-out effort'—and the oplate phrase, 'short of war,' is conspicuously lacking."

Wheeler said Congress could, if it would, still refuse to appropriate funds for Great Britain "without first obtaining Mr. Churchill's war aims—without knowing of the objectives are the extermination of Hitler or the annihiliation of 80,000,000 German people."

He added that "Americans should still insist that Congress carefully scrutinize all appropriations to the end that no tax dollars are squandered."

After asserting that most or all proponents of the British aid bill agreed that the President was not authorized to use convoys and could not send armed forces into combat areas, Wheeler cited a statement by the President that "dollars alone will not win this war."

"Does this mean," he asked, "that if supplies are not enough, troops will be dispatched? What is meant by the President's 'bridge of ships' across the ocean? Does this mean convoys? Convoys manned by American sailors who will shoot at and be shot by German sea raiders?"

Bill Proposes Sea-Level Canal At Panama

By Henry N. Dorris
Copyright by New York Times

Conversion of the Panama Canal from a high-level lock "trough" to a sea-level canal was proposed in a joint resolution introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Mansfield, of Texas, chairman of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee.

Mansfield said he offered the proposal primarily to make the canal as nearly invulnerable to air attack as possible, citing the success of the British and Germans in keeping open the Suez and Kiel canals, both sea-level affairs, despite attacks from the air.

The Panama Canal, whose highest point is 85 feet above sea level, is especially vulnerable to attack, Mansfield said. He added that with the completion of the third set of locks, authorized last summer by Congress, and which are expected to be in operation within three years, the canal could be reduced to sea level without interruption to canal traffic.

Mansfield said the cost of the project has been estimated at $1,000,000,000. It is backed, he said, by several eminent engineers whose identity he preferred not to disclose until his measure reached a hearing stage.

The proposal has not been submitted to Army engineers nor to the Administration, Mansfield said, but he indicated that it had the backing of Army and Navy officers.

In a statement accompanying the joint resolution, Mr. Mansfield said:

"The very fact that we are preparing defenses against airplane bombing indicates that it should not be assumed that hostile airplanes can be kept out of range of the canal. What is happening to London now shows that an air defense cannot be made impenetrable. The only conclusion is that a lock canal cannot be rendered secure beyond remote probabilities . . .

"It seems more or less obvious that locks would be quite vulnerable to bomb hits, and that their repairs would be slow and difficult. If the pool of the Gatun reservoir should be drained it could not be restored within the duration of the war. On the other hand, hits on a sea-level canal could only produce minor bank slides, which probably would not involve serious obstructions and which could be repaired in a relatively short time."

U. S., Today, Would Suffer Defeat in War, Lindbergh Says

By the Associated Press

New York, March 20.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today asked Americans who opposed United States intervention in the European war to organize and attend mass meetings throughout the Nation and to make known their position in repeated letters to their legislators and local newspapers.

Writing in Collier's Magazine, Lindbergh concluded that "for us to enter the conflict in Europe at this time would result in defeat and humiliation," and asserted that by remaining out of the war the United States "can build a military and commercial position on this continent that is impregnable to attack and which will force other nations to trade with us, if through expediency alone."

After revealing that in 1938 he told highly placed British officials of Germany's air power and warned them of the need for developing British aviation, Lindbergh asserted that both France and England had waited "until it was too late."

"We in America have waited until it is too late," he continued, "and yet we step closer and closer to the war as though hypnotized by its bombing and by its fury.

"Like France and England in 1939, we are unprepared today. We have not as many thoroughly modern fighting planes in our Army and Navy combined as Germany produces in a single week, and our Army is deplorably lacking in such essential items as tanks and anti-tank cannon.

"We have not made the sacrifice necessary for adequate rearmament.

Lindbergh asserted that interventionists had proceeded slowly because they knew that "it was useless for them to advocate openly a declaration of war."

The policy of interventionists, he said, was "to support every movement that would lead us in the direction of war and to oppose every movement that would not—always under their mask of 'aid short of war.'"

He said that it was Britain's purpose to minimize German success and to "exaggerate all British successes" and recalled that "those of us who saw the growth of the German air force were severely assailed because of the reports we made describing it, although these reports now turn out to have been almost unforgivably conservative."

Air Corps Accident Rate Is Doubled

The Army yesterday reported that there has been a "definite upturn" in its aircraft accident rate, with the result that the number of airmen killed this year will be double that of last year.

It was disclosed that there were 85 fatalities among Army pilots and plane crewmen during the six-month period ended December 31, as compared with 88 during the whole prior fiscal year. Nineteen deaths in January and 28 in February make it appear, the War Department said, that there may be as many as 200 deaths during the current fiscal year.

In an unprecedented formal statement warning of the impending increase in pilot fatalities, the department said that the chief factors responsible are the halving of the pilot training period in the emergency and the great increase in the proportion of pilots with but brief flying experience.

Expansion Cited

"No air force can be expected to expand a number of times and maintain the same low accident rate it has fought for years to establish," it was stated. "This rate depends directly upon the experience of the pilots, the leaders and supervisory personnel, and nothing can be substituted for experience.

"Let us face the situation with a calm realization that preparation for war takes its toll as well as war itself, and that there is no more hazardous profession at arms than that which the combat flier has elected to follow."

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, discussed the accident situation at his press conference, disclosing that the Army air fatality rate had steadily dropped from one for every 1,718 hours flown in 1921 to one for every 22,467 hours in 1939. It increased to one for each 20,209 hours in 1940, he added.

Marshall, back from an inspection trip of Army posts, declared he was much impressed with the "remarkable quality of the selectees and their willingnes and cheerful approach."

"The units are crystalizing into a great army," he added.

Dearth of Planes

The Chief of Staff said that ground troops have sufficient material for training, but that there were more trained pilots and mechanics than there are planes for them to fly. This situation, however, should be remedied within two or three months, he stated.

He said there are no present plans for increasing the Army strength beyond 1,418,000 men—scheduled to be in service by July. Weapons and other "critical" equipment which takes a long time to produce are now on order for an Army of 800,000 more men, he said, while appropriations have been asked for other equipment—more easily obtained—for such a force.

The statement on air accidents revealed that poor pilot technique or errors of judgment account for about three out of four plane accidents, while the percentage due to material, weather and other causes is decreasing.

Board Named To Study U. S. Transportation

By the Associated Press

A three-man board headed by Wayne Coy, 37, of Delphi, Ind., was nominated by President Roosevelt yesterday to study and report on the adequacy of existing rail, water, and truck systems to carry the Nation's ever-expanding commerce.

Coy, a Democrat and assistant to Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, was named along with Charles West, 46, of Granville, Ohio, and Nelson Lee Smith, 42, of Hopkinton, N. H.

West is a former Democratic House member and served a brief period as Undersecretary of the Interior while doing liaison work at the Capitol for the President.

Smith, an economist and native of Baltimore, is now chairman of the Public Service Commission of New Hampshire. A Republican, he has been vice president of the National Association of Railway and Utilities Commissioners since 1937.

The nominations must be approved by the Senate before the board can begin to function. Salaries of $10,000 a year are provided. The law under which it was appointed, the 1940 Transportation Act, requires that it make a preliminary report by May 1.

Its authority expires in September, 1943, but the President has the right to extend it another two years.

The law instructs the board to investigate the "fitness or unfitness" of the three transportation groups to meet the requirements of present-day traffic, including the fast-growing movement of defense supplies.

It also will look into Federal subsidies, direct and indirect, received by each transportation group, and ascertain whether any discrimination is involved in Federal and State taxes.

Keep Cool, First Lady Exhorts 75th Club

By Jesse Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

"The main thing women must do in the present emergency is to keep their heads," Mrs. Roosevelt told members of the Seventy-fifth Club at their luncheon in her honor yesterday at the Kennedy-Warren.

They shoud be careful not to repeat gossip and not to repeat rumors, but to find out whether they are true, she said.

"We don't know what we may have to meet, but whatever it is, we can certainly meet it better if we are calm. There is no sense lying awake worrying about what is going to happen next. Women can do more than anybody else to keep the country sane and prepare it to meet whatever circumstances we have to meet."

Mrs. Roosevelt reiterated the importance of promting social welfare as a factor in national defense. Although not so spectacular as learning to drive trucks and ambulances or how to shoot, it is more essential, she declared, and can only be done community by community. In order to have a people ready to defend democracy, every individual must feel that he has a stake in democracy—something to defend, she said.

She quoted the statement of Dr. Martha Eliot, following her recent visit to England, that nowhere in England today is there a child who does not have a hot lunch. Social improvements are being carried on there during the war, she said.

"If they are important enough to be made during a war, they are important enough for us to be working on all the time," she asserted.

Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out that the country had not been awake enough to learn from the crisis it went through from 1914 to 1920. Many rejections in the draft then as now stemmed from malnutrition, she said—not always due to poverty but often to ignorance.

She recalled that two-thirds of the men in one New Jersey CCC camp did not read easily because of eye defects and that many with tenth-grade educations had a fifth-grade average in their readings, as other evidences of the need for more effective social welfare.

Defense preparation, she said, must be not only from a physical, but also from a mental and spiritual standpoint. Young people must be given an appreciation of those things they are preparing to defend, she said.

The First Lady wore a red dress, trimmed with gold military braid, and a brown felt turban, trimmed with fur balls. Mrs. Luther Patrick, of Alabama, president of the club, presided, wearing a gray suit and small hat of rose beige. Mrs. William H. Smathers, of New Jersey, announced that proceeds of the luncheon would be given to the alumnae of the Weightman and Langdon Schools for handicapped children as a gift in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Smathers wore a suit and hat of birdseye blue.

Music for the luncheon was provided by the Marine Orchestra and by Harry McMains, soloist at Mount Vernon Place Church, who sang three numbers, accompanied by Deane Shure, organist and composer.

About 75 members and guests attended the affair, which is an annual occasion.

2 Speakers Heard By Motor Corps

Wallace B. Phillips, director general of American Ambulances in Great Britain, and Miss Mabel Boardman were guest speakers yesterday at the regular monthly luncheon of the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross Motor Corps at Wardman Park Hotel. The date of the meeting, which ordinarily would not have been held until the first week in April, was changed so that Mr. Phillips, who is in town for only a short time, could describe to the 40 members of this active Red Cross group, the ambulance work in Britain.

Plans were formulated at the business meeting for the greatly expanded interests and activities of the corps in connection with National Defense, and regular transportation services between Washington and its six adjacent military establishments were discussed.

Mothers' Health Clinic Aided 2,300 Last Year, Report Shows

More than 2,300 mothers were aided by the District Mothers Health Association in 1940, 400 citizens contributed almost $6,000 to its support, and its part in the community health program is rapidly growing, according to the annual report of the association given by Mrs. Prentiss Willson, president, at its annual luncheon, held yesterday at Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. Highlights of the luncheon were the reports of the success of the drive for increased public support, and the address Frederick Osborn, chairman of the Army and Navy committtee on welfare and recreation, and noted authority on population trends.

Mrs. Willson reported that the increased demand for the services of the Mothers Health Clinic during the past year have led to an enlarged staff of four physicians, a full-time trained nurse, an executive secretary, and a number of volunteer workers. Nearly 700 new patients were added to the 1,700 previously registered.

Mr. Osborn declared it was impossible to have an improving civilization without planned parentage. A birth-control program, he said, is important to the quality of the population. It is necessary to add positive aspects to the program because our stronger stock is dying out too rapidly. It must be made possible for the superior parents, of whatever economic class, to afford children.

He suggested that there be added to the national program for local birth-control units prenatal clinics, premarriage clinics and nutrition clinics for young children.

A "baby show" staged by colored mothers at the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A. was the unique method by which a negro committee of the Mothers Health Association raised more than $100 for its educational fund. Mothers who had entered their babies in the contest bought votes at 5 cents apiece. One-third of the money collected by each mother was returned to her for her baby, and the remainder went into the committee's treasury.

The association, which is affiliated with the Birth Control Federation of America, is receiving cooperation from an increasing number of welfare organizations in Washington and Montgomery County in its educational program, it was reported by Mrs. Willson. Speakers have been supplied to the Travelers' Aid Society, the Montgomery County Maternal Health Association, the Graduate Nurses Society, and other welfare groups.

The 1941 fund drive, begun in January, has brought in $5,541 from 413 contributors, and its success will enable the Association to further enlarge its work in the community health program.

The eventual establishment of a "marriage counseling" service was predicted by Mrs. Willson in her report. "Such services are operating in Cleveland and Philadelphia," she said, "and the increasing demand for premarital advice has caused some of us to wish to develop a more complete service than we now have."

The luncheon was attendad by officers, trustees and sponsors of the Mothers Health Association, and by a large number of leaders of cooperating agencies and citizens interested in the work of the association.

Miss Jarrett Speaks at Y. W.

Women of Australia are standing shoulder to shoulder with the men in their defense effort, Miss Patricia Jarrett, former Australian newspaperwoman, said yesterday, speaking at the World Fellowship luncheon of the Y. W. C. A.

The women, she said, are organized to do all kinds of work and are training as engineers, air pilots and mechanics and for work in the munitions industries. There is no field where they can serve that they are not preparing to do so and replace men at any time needed, she said. Australia is preparing for home defense, as well as giving all possible aid to Britain, said Miss Jarrett.

The Y. W. C. A. is training leaders to help in volunteer work, she added.

Honor guests at the luncheon included Mrs. Richard G. Casey, wife of the Australian Minister; Lady Campbell, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the British Embassy; Mrs. Redvers Opie, wife of the First Secretary of the British Embassy; Mme. Hsai, former national president of the Y. W. C. A. of China; Mrs. Nelson Johnson, wife of the newly appointed United States Minister to Australia, and Miss Elsa Peterson, president of the Y. W. C. A. here.

Mrs. William S. Culbertson, chairman of the World Fellowship committee, presided at the luncheon.

EASTER CARDS, like Christmas cards, will help swell the fund for British relief, Miss Harriet Winslow announces. The Easter card shop will open Monday at 1018 Connecticut Avenue, where Christmas cards were sold and later will be in connection with the Picadilly Arcade.

The gold cardboard will be labeled "A British Nest Egg—the golden yolk has gone to Britain but I have filled the shell with my Easter greetings to you." The dollar that buys the card will maintain a child in the country, away from bombed areas, for a week. Two dollars, which will buy a British basket with a little duck in it, will provide a child's warm coat, says Miss Winslow.

In the window will be a large golden egg, open to receive old gold and jewelry, making a "yolk" to aid Britain. People who have any old gold, from a necklace to an odd earring or a gold tooth, are asked to contribute.

At Christmas time, Miss Winslow and her committee turned over $6,000 from the sale of cards.

Legion Contributions Send Blood-Bank Funds Past $2,600

GIFT TO THE BLOOD BANK—Mrs. Elsie L. Deavers (left), president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the District Fire Department, presents to Miss Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent of Children's Hospital, a check for the blood bank fund

American Legion contributions to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund passed the $2,600 mark yesterday with the receipt of checks from two more posts.

Meanwhile, plans were completed for two benefit parties which will be held tomorrow night, and a third group, non-Legion, announced that it will give a blood bank benefit on April 2. The latter is Alpha Lambda Phi Sorority, whose party will be held at the home of Miss Cynthia Michaelson, 1365 Hamilton Street Northwest.

Cooley-McCullough Post, No. 22, American Legion, presented a check for $65, collected at a meeting of the post and auxiliary members Tuesday night. The donation was announced by Guy Nadeau, commander; Miss Peggy Gauges, auxiliary president; Charles Kohen, and Mrs. Pauline Chambers, collection chairmen.

At the same time, Mack Myers, commander of Bunker Hill Post, No. 31, presented to The Washington Post a check for $43.65, representing proceeds of a benefit party held on March 1.

The U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post No. 2, composed of World War yeomanettes, reported that $51 was raised at the party given Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Estalle Ruby, 5425 Thirtieth Place Northwest.

The two benefits scheduled for tomorrow night are those of the Department of Commerce Post No. 45 and Washington Post No. 29, Twenty-ninth Division Association. The former will be at the home of Agnes Thaxton, 1402 Morse Street Northeast, the other at the Colonial Hotel.

Clifton Fadiman Talks On 'Inside Radio'

Clifton Fadiman, the man who holds the cards and hence knows all the right answers on the "Information Please" program, will come out in the open at Constitution Hall tomorrow in an effort to prove that he can think up the answers himself if he wants to. The "mental maestro" of radio's most famous brain trusters will speak here at 8 p. m. on the subject, "Inside Radio." A portion of the proceeds will be turned over to the Children's Hospital blood bank fund by the Women's City Club, sponsor of the lecture.

FADIMAN

Fadiman has promised to reveal considerable inside information on "Information Please," as well as to discuss his own pet notions concerning radio in general.

The list of patrons for Fadiman's lecture here is headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and includes Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mrs. Harlan F. Stone, Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Mrs. Harold Ickes. General chairman of the lecture committee is Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt.

Tickets for orchestra and tier seats are priced at $1.10; box seats are $1.20 and $1.65. Both varieties are available at the Women's City Club, 736 Jackson Place, and at Cappel's ticket bureau, 1330 G Street Northwest.

The Importance of MEAT

When the Stork Hovers

What a glorious time of love and hope and expectancy for the wife . . . those months you wait . . . if you're healthy! . . . What a joy to look forward to—a bouncing, healthy baby. The modern physician is likely to say to expectant mothers: "When you're feeding two, I want you to eat meat!"

THE complete and excellent-quality protein in meat builds body tissues—and, Mother-to-Be, you're replenishing one set of tissues and building another.

Meat's minerals (copper and iron) help build good, red blood and its phosphorus helps build strong teeth-to-come and bones-to-grow.

Meat is a liberal source of the vitamin B group which helps forestall certain ailments and nervous disorders which may have a tendency to develop during this critical time.

But besides meeting so many healthful objectives, isn't the grand, good, savory taste of meat another real blessing to the expectant mother? Consult your physician regarding the place of meat in your diet during pregnancy and during the nursing period.

Chinese Dishes First In Recipe Contest

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

THE BARNYARD rooster will have something to crow about this week when he sees the results of The Post recipe contest. And no doubt the hens will go along clucking gayly and laying more eggs, proud to furnish them for such dishes as the contestants make.

From far away Hawaii comes flavorsome Chinese dishes submitted by Mrs. S. H. Walker, of Fort Belvoir, Va. Mrs. Walker formerly lived in Hawaii. A Chinese friend gave her many recipes while in that territory and she has used them with great success since she has returned to the United States.

Martha Ellyn,

Centuries of training and flavor appreciation are back of the Chinese foods of today. China's four basic foods — rice, soybeans, pork and vegetables — have been worked into symphonies of color, flavor and texture. In presenting these Chinese foods Mrs. Walker wins the first award of $10. The following are her winning menu and recipes.

Chinese Menu

Chinese Mushroom Soup
Chow Eggs Hot Rolls
Chinese Fruit Salad
Almond Cakes Chinese Tea

Chinese Mushroom Soup

Cut up one-half stalk celery and 1 dry onion. Boil in soup stock. When nearly done add one dozen sliced white mushrooms, and one-half cup of white chicken meat. Boil about 10 minutes, and then add salt and pepper to season, and 2 tablespoons of Chinese sauce. Add 4 grated water chestnuts. Beat 2 eggs and add to the soup. Cook until firm and serve at once. Serves 6.

Chow Eggs—This is the main dish of the menu. Mince one-half cup of any cooked meat, (chicken is best) one-fourth cup canned or fresh mushrooms, one half cup water chestnuts, one cup chopped bamboo shoots, and add to these ingredients, 6 eggs and beat thoroughly. Add salt and pepper to taste. Scramble in a hot grease skillet—but keep the heat low. Garnish with chopped parsley, and serve with Chinese sauce. Cooking time about 10 minutes. Peanut oil or butter is good for lubricating the skillet. Takes about ¼ of cup. Serves 6.

Chinese Fruit Salad—Mix equal quantities of finely cut apple, celery and bean sprouts. Mix thoroughly with mayonnaise and season with Chinese sauce. Garnish with strips of pimiento, minced kumquats, maraschino cherries and chopped nuts. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

Almond Cakes—Mix ¾ pound of butter with a cupful of sugar and 2 beaten eggs, 3 cupsful of flour and 1 teaspoon of vanilla and a pinch of salt, 2 cupsful of blanched chopped almonds. A little piece of dough is pinched off, formed into a ball and slightly flattened on top and a whole almond stuck there. Bake in a moderate oven, in a pan in which they are placed far enough apart not to touch.

Any type of rolls may be served and also Chinese tea.

Mrs. George T. Glorius, 2606 Twenty-fourth Street Northeast, highlights a luncheon menu with a combination egg and lobster dish to win the second prize of $5. Her menu and egg dish recipe follows:

Luncheon Menu

Buffet eggs with lobster sauce
Brussel sprouts with celery
Corn Crisps
Chopped Green Salad
Sauted pears with chocolate sauce

Buffet Eggs with Lobster Sauce

Chop together 1 cup cooked lobster, 1 cup cooked crab meat, ½ cup cooked shrimps and ½ cup cooked oysters. Blend with 1 egg beaten, to which has been added ½ tablespoon cream. Season with ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ¼ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon mustard and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Cut 12 hard-cooked eggs in halves lengthwise, remove the yolks and reserve for other purposes. Fill the halves with seafood mixture. Arrange on a platter with toast points. Pour over the lobster sauce and serve. Garnish with a few of the egg yolks pressed through a coarse sieve.

Lobster Salad—Make the sauce of 3 tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons butter and 1½ cups cream. Add 1 tablespoon lobster coral and ½ cup cooked diced lobster. Add ¼ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper and 1 tablespoon sherry and cook over hot water for 15 minutes. Makes 12 servings.

Miss Martha Ryan, 1627 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest, wins the third prize of $3 with her suggestion for a Lenten supper. The following is her menu and recipe for Savory Eggs and Sour Cream Herb Sauce:

Sour Cream Herb Sauce

Savory Eggs and Sour Cream Herb Sauce—Split 1 large or 2 small cloves of garlic at one end for juice to escape; leave sections attached at other end. It can then be easily lifted from the sauce when done. Combine 1½ cups thick, sour cream, 1 large or 2 small cloves of garlic, ¾ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon chopped celery (leaves or stalks) and 1 tablespoon flour. Stir all these ingredients together until sauce is smooth. Cook until slightly thickened, stirring constantly. Then lift out garlic. Drop a tablespoonful of the sauce in bottom of each of four well-buttered ramekins. Break two eggs into each and cover with remainder of sauce. Sprinkle with cracker crumbs and dot with butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 12 minutes, for soft, 20 minutes for hard-cooked eggs. Serves four.

Creole Eggs—Melt 2 tablespoons butter in skillet and add 1 tablespoon minced onion and 2 tablespoons minced green pepper and saute for 5 minutes. Add 1 can tomato juice and ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and mix thoroughly. Pour into a shallow casserole that has a cover. Break 6 eggs, one at a time, into the sauce. Cover dish and bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 8 minutes or until eggs are set. Sprinkle with chopped olives or parsley before serving. Serves 6.

Northwest

Eggs Convert—Melt 1-8 pound butter in frying pan. Add 1 cup sliced mushrooms. Cook over slow fire about 5 minutes. Add 2 medium-sized tomatoes, cubed, and 2 tablespoons chopped chives. Break 8 eggs into a bowl and add ¼ teaspoon salt. Gently break the yolks but do not whip or stir. Add eggs to other ingredients and stir slowly and gently. Cook until eggs are done according to taste—dry or moist. Serve with toast and green link sausages. Serves 4 people. One tablespoon onion juice may be substituted for chives and 4 slices of bacon may be substituted for mushrooms.

Mrs. Donald Cantwell,
Sandy Springs, Md.

Eggs Shortcake—Sift 2 cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt and 4 teaspoons baking powder together. Cut in 4 tablespoons shortening; add 1 cup grated cheese, 1 beaten egg, ½ cup milk. Roll ½-inch thick on lightly floured surface; cut in squares or in rings; bake in hot oven, 400 degrees for 20 minutes. Split, serve with egg sauce.

Egg Sauce—Make cream sauce of 3 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons flour and 2 cups milk. Add ½ teaspoon salt, 1/16 teaspoon red pepper, 1 tablespoon minced parsley and 6 chopped hard-cooked eggs. Serves six.

Mrs. John D. Swisher,
61 W. Washington Street,
Hagerstown, Md.

Stuffed Eggs in Tomato Jelly—Soak ¾ tablespoon gelatine in ¼ cup cold water and dissolve in 1 can hot tomato juice. Add 1 teaspoon sugar and 1 tablespoon vinegar and chill. Split 6 hard-cooked eggs, remove the yolks, and mix them with 3 tablespoons caviar, ¼ teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon lemon juice and 6 ripe olives chopped. Refill the egg whites with the mixture. When the tomato jelly begins to thicken, pour half of it into wet molds and add the stuffed eggs. Chill until jelly is set and add the remainder of the tomato mixture. Chill and unmold on lettuce. Serve with mayonnaise. Recipe makes 6 large salads using whole egg in each mold, or 12 small salads using ½ egg in each mold.

Mrs. Clare G. Brunsdon,
Morningside Village,
Anacostia, D. C.

Egg Casserole With Tuna Fish—Drain oil from 1 7-ounce can tuna fish and save the oil. Flake fish and add 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Arrange 4 hard-cooked eggs that have been sliced, the tuna and ½ cup cooked peas in alternate layers in a greased casserole. Melt 2 tablespoons butter and add 2 tablespoons flour, and blend. Add 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and ½ cup grated American cheese, and ⅛ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Pour over casserole mixture. Top with ½ cup fresh bread crumbs mixed with the tuna fish oil. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 30 minutes. Serves four.

Delightful Additions

The next time you serve diced grapefruit cocktail, mix in a few chopped, pimiento-stuffed olives. You will be delighted what the flavors do for each other. A sprig of mint added to the water in which you cook fresh peas, green beans or cauliflower, also does wonders. Add ¼ teaspoon of powdered cinnamon to each 2 cups of water in which you cook beets.

The Gentler Sex

Whether so much that parades as principle,

Today's Social Notes

(FROM THE TRUTHTOWN TORCH)

Women socialites are organizing to "keep the home fires burning" while their men folk are in defense service.

A movement to train society leaders to carry on racing, polo playing, yachting and other sports activities of the bluebloods is ebing organized by Mrs. St. John Chinchilla. In her bi-monthly column in The Huntstown Bugle, Mrs. Chinchilla points out that society is losing many of its best men steeplechase riders, polo players and yachtsmen to the Army and Navy. She writes:

"We must train women to ride in the spring hunt meets. We must put them on polo ponies and place them in charge of yachts. Otherwise how can we carry on our racing, polo and regattta traditions?

"Furthermore we must encourage women to go in for big game hunting and exploring. In fact, we may soon have to organize a feminine safari into the jungles.

"This situation is desperate. Unless our women rise to the emergency the gentlemanly sports of our upper classes will not be preserved."

Mrs. Chinchilla has started a recruiting office for her movement at the Hotel Swank.

Sacrifice

Society is agog over the announcement that Mrs. Farthingale Midas has consented to open her estate Plushwood for the benefit garden tour for the Refugee Babies Condensed Milk Fund. This will be the first time that the lavish estate has ever been open to the eyes of others than the owner's most intimate friends.

"I am simply appalled at the idea of having just everybody running around over Plushwood," said Mrs. Midas. "If my husband knew of it, I fear he would turn in his grave. However I feel that at a time like his we should all put our personal feelings aside and make some sacrifices."

Only the general gardens of the estate will be opened, the private ones being shut off from the eyes of the curious by canvas curtains suspended from the limbs of trees.

Dubious Honors

More than 50 of Truthtown's bluest blooded dogs attended the Canine Cocktail Party hold yesterday at the Plush Sofa Club. Prize for the dog most resembling its owner went to Shaggy Boy, Airedale owned by Mrs. Stuyvesant Frowsy. The award to the least obedient dog went to Snippy Girl, owned by Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus.

Hat and Glove Twosome

It's smart to match accessories this spring, whether you key a hat to gloves, a bag to the dress belt, or gloves to shoes. For a bit of smart simplicity, match handstitched Kislav gloves to an off-the-face halo sombrero. These washable doeskin gloves, now made in America, come in dead white and the popular color of the season—Brazilian Beige. Wear them with navy or black to spotlight your new spring costume. Casual shorties such as these are very practical because they can be worn with a coat, suit or dress with equal facility

Beware of Sheet That Feels Too Soft

When buying sheets, beware of the sheet with the too soft smooth finish. This sheet may be oversized—that is, heavily loaded with starch. Such a sheet will become sleazy and loosely woven after its first washing.

To help you avoid the purchase of such an overalzed sheet, the American Institute of Laundering has devised an easy test. Simply rub parts of the sheet together between your hands. If a fine powder comes off on your fingers, watch out. This sheet will lose its body when it is washed.

Men's Shoes Revamped for Walking Ease

New Invention in Men's Shoes Cradles Heel for Comfort

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor.

A revolutionary shoe that is a paragon of comfort, yet sacrifices none of the handsome appearance in men's shoes, recently has been developed. This shoe is built on a principle as simple as that of lulling a baby to sleep—it cradles the heel.

Joseph A. Jung, the inventor of the shoe, was for 20 years consultant and designer of custom-made shoes at the medical center in Rochester, Minn. Through his years of service in a humanitarian capacity, he found it necessary to invent this type of shoe to do his work properly.

As about 80 per cent of the body weight is supported by the heel, Mr. Jung found that by rounding the base of the heel wall the shoe comes up and meets the sides of the foot, thus equalizing the body bearing. It is not a corrective shoe or an arch support shoe, but is merely designed to give men a natural ease in walking.

"Manufacturers knew this was coming," said Mr. Jung, "but most of them just have not had the facilities to carry it through. Within a year we will be able to give this same kind of comfort to women's shoes too."

Mary Haworth's Mail

For 20-Odd Years, Wife Has Known Bleak Existence With Cold, Stubborn, Close Mouthed, Tight Fisted Man; Her Daughter Asks If She Should Leave Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Ever since I can remember, my parents have not "got along" together, with resultant innumerable quarrels and hurt feelings. As I grew older, my sympathies were about equally divided, because I realized their difficulties reflected an unwise mating. They came to this country almost 25 years ago, and as strangers in a foreign land, they doubtless felt the need of someone, anyone, to rely on—and so married each other without giving sufficient consideration to love, or to mental and emotional compatability.

My father is a rather cold, strong-willed man who wants little more from marriage than to have things his own way, without being "nagged." My mother, although stubborn, has that warm nature which greatly misses affection and tenderness. My father is the sort of man who doesn't express such affection as he may feel. But they have been good parents, sacrificing much to rear their children,—even to the extent of sacrificing to this day, to put my younger brother through college.

Old fashioned in his ideas, my father is close-lipped and tight-fisted in money matters, giving mother just enough of an allowance to buy groceries, and no more. Out of this allowance, mother, who is quite economical, manages to save a few dollars; and on learning about this, recently, father was very angry. He realized there was nothing he could do about it, but he takes revenge, at times, by referring to what he calls her "dishonesty." Yet, in fairness to him, I must point out that he is a "good man," with many admirable traits: hard working, honest, witty, etc., but in other ways obnoxious to a serious minded, sensitive woman.

Had it not been for their children, mother would have left him long ago. Indeed, she says now that she was a coward in not separating from him years ago, when she was better fitted to earn her own living. But today, I cannot see how she could possibly extricate herself from the situation with any advantage to herself. I know that my father, loveless as he is, would be lost without her. And since she can't earn her own living—and wouldn't think of living with my husband and me—how could she manage?

Her one fear, in leaving at this time, would be that father might cut off my brother's schooling. So she plans to wait a few years until he is self sustaining. What would you advise a woman to do, in these circumstances? Sincerely,

C. M.

Only the Weak Submit to Despotism

DEAR C. M.: Likely your mother will, and probably should, remain with your father until death separates them. And therefore, I believe she should cease making herself miserable by comparing What-Is with What-Might or What-Should-Have-Been—and settle down to making the best of what she has to work with. As you, in fairness to your father, have pointed out, the situation is as uncomfortable for him as for her—since he is no more able to adapt to her expectations than she is able to accommodate herself to his idiosyncrasies; and yet, so far as you know, he has never thought of abandoning her!

One senses that there is something rather childlike in your mother's nature, so that she needs must cling to your father's obstinate strength, even while perennially pouting, for 20-odd years, about his granite-cool lack of pliable emotional responsiveness. Were she less childlike,—had she grown psychologically apace with her calendar age,—she would (I think) have long since worked out some better solution to her problem than simply "hanging on," in a mood of baffled, outraged endurance.

Had she ever been a woman of essentially self-reliant, socially competent personality, she would have adopted an "either-or" attitude toward the conflict in the beginning. First, I think, she would have sought indefatigably the key to the riddle of why she and her husband were not "getting along." She would not have assumed the fault was all his. She would have invested all her sympathy, insight, wisdom and tact in the project of (a) winning him to her way; or (b) of becoming, without loss of integrity, more like him; at least, to the extent of adjusting philosophically to his taciturn temperament.

Secondly, supposing she realized, after some years of fruitless conciliatory effort, that they were of basically hostile temperament,—each having an almost chemically irritating effect upon the other,—she would (if she were a strong character) have let him without stopping to count the cost, because driven by the strong character's powerful impulse to assert its independence of mean or chafing domination: to preserve its integrity at any cost!

Since she has shown neither great wisdom nor great strength in her trial, it is reasonable to assume she finds necessary shelter in the shadow of your father's rock-like personality,—and that she would be far worse off, if she left him, than she will be in going the remainder of the way with him. As for her theory that she must "stick it out" for a few more years, until your brother's education is completed,—I think that is rationalization of her reluctance to burn her bridges behind her.

It has been my observation that really mature individuals never permit themselves to be martyred in their social relationships. They recognize that "where there's a will, there's a way;"—over, under, around or through almost any personality conflict. And they proceed to find that way, without loss of time or loud lament.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Lace Curtains Have Long Life

The durability of lace net curtains, well known to homemakers for many years, is evidenced by the fact that the first lace net curtain to be made in the United States back in the early 1860's, has lasted through the years. While the complete curtain has not been kept, a section of it, now in the possession of one of the lace manufacturers, is still in excellent condition.

Today's lace net curtains are far different in design and much softer and sheerer in texture, but they are made with the same durable basic weave. The yarns are spiraled around each other in the open meshes so that every thread is literally tied in place. This gives strength to the curtain for a long life of hard wear and the ability to stand up after many, many launderings.

Thin Girls Should Have Outdoor Exercise to Tone Their Muscles

By Ida Jean Kain

MOST THIN girls think exercise is only for the overweight—and that is one of the main reasons they find it so difficult to put on curves. As a matter of fact, exercise is even more important to the underweight. She needs higher vitality and the only way it can be developed is by toning the muscles. Vitality is not in the muscles, it is in the organs—but good muscle tone means a better functioning system.

Thin girls benefit most from outdoor activities for they improve the appetite and nervous system. The rule should be not less than one hour a day in the fresh air, preferably two hours. Now that Spring has arrived, as many weekends as possible should be spent in the country.

Outdoor activities which do most for the thin girls are hiking, archery, golf, rowing and swimming. Such strenuous sports as tennis and badminton may be too tiring. The movie girls who lose weight under the strain of picture-making gain back the lost pounds on just such an active program—but they are used to it.

Mild Exercise Works Magic

Mild exercises alteranted with plenty of rest make an ideal gaining program. It's the rhythm of activity and relaxation that works the magic. And, of course, there's the matter of a good diet. Your exercise program is guaranteed to give you an appetite. But you must see to it that you get the food elements which go to build vitality. If you eat too many rich foods and do not get your full quota of minerals and vitamins you cannot assimilate what you eat. It's only what you assimilate that enables you to gain.

You also need more calories, but these should be in the easily digested foods such as whole milk, cream, bread, butter, whole-grain cereals and light puddings with a custard base. You should be able to add 500 extra calories a day in these foods without putting the slightest tax on your digestive system. That many calories above your requirement will enable you to gain half a pound a week.

Mme. van Kleffens Tells of Flight From the Hague and Trip to Indies

Teacup Talk, Dutch Accent

By Hope Ridings Miller.

AS IF SHE WERE an old hand at the game, youthful Mme. Van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Foreign Minister, yesterday held the first press conference in her career . . . and came out with flying colors.

With a frankness evidenced all too infrequently by visiting foreigners, she answered a barrage of questions fired at her by a small corps of newspaperwomen. The setting was the drawing room of the Netherlands Legation. Mme. Loudon, wife of the Minister, presided at the tea table, while her guest discussed a variety of subjects, ranging all the way from her escape from The Hague during the German occupation, to her forthcoming trip to the Dutch East Indies.

Just why I expected Mme. Van Kleffens to be well past middle age, I don't know. But when she walked in, looking as if she were holidaying from college, I wasn't prepared for that slip of a girl to be the distinguished woman I had come to see. (I was to learn, later, that she is the youngest Foreign Minister's wife in the history of Holland.)

"May I have three lumps of sugar in my tea?" I heard her ask Mme. Loudon. (Having been strictly rationed on sugar during her recent months in London, she's having all she wants in Washington.) Then she sat down and answered one question after another, in a chatty way that made all of us forget it was a press conference after all.

This is her first visit to Washington, but her second trip to the United States. She came over 12 years ago to see some relatives. "My mother is an American," she said, in perfect English. "She was born in Salt Lake City. My grandmother and aunt still live there."

MME. VAN KLEFFENS, however, is a native of Holland and was born in The Hague, where she was living at the time of the German occupation. On the fateful morning of May 10 she, and her husband and the minister of the colonies, Charles Joseph Welter, hastily gathered up a few belongings and boarded a plane for England.

She was the only cabinet wife who had a chance to leave Holland. Other ministers were taken over on a British ship and there was no room for their families to go along. But let her tell this part of her story:

"You see, there was a very great danger that all government officials would be captured by parachutists and my husband and the colonies minister were urged to leave as soon as possible by plane in order to establish alone, if necessary, our government in England. My husband could not wait for the British ship, so I had a chance to leave with him. We had a difficult time on that trip, although it was of but two and half hours' duration. The plane's petrol tank was leaking, and we had forgotten our map of the English coast. Fortunately, my husband had fished there often, and remembered something of the topography. So finally we landed at Brighton, just before the petrol ran out entirely."

Mme. van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands foreign minister, has a cup of tea (with three lumps of sugar) before she holds her first press conference. With her is Mme. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Minister to the United States, who's probably giving her a few last-minute pointers

IN LONDON in recent months she has been busy with welfare work for the 2,000 Dutch refugees who managed to get to England but have had scant means of support since then. There was the problem of getting food for them; then clothing. "And, after that was done, we started packing supplies for our people back home," she added.

Incidentally, there is no direct means of communication between the Dutch in England and their relatives in Holland. "But we do write to mutual friends in neutral countries and they manage to pass reports back and forth."

Talk turned from Europe to Mme. van Kleffens' current trip, and she told something of the problems of traveling by clipper across the Atlantic. Apparently, it's not so pleasant as you might think. There was the little matter of having three of her six hats ruined by a wave that swept into the clipper as they came down in New York Harbor just before coming into the airport.

"My luggage is very light," she said. "I've only three suit cases and a hat box."

Subsequent remarks indicated she must have had a master packer to arrange her clothes, for she brought along three suits, three coats, three evening gowns and eleven dresses, one of which is of her own invention.

"I figured it out myself," she said, with a twinkle in her gray-blue eyes. "It has a separate skirt and three different blouses, so it can pass as three dresses in one."

HER TRIP to the East Indies? Well, she implied the reason she and her husband were traveling in that direction might be easy to explain but she didn't go into that. Yes, she had always wanted to go there. En route to the West Coast, she and her husband will stop off briefly with her relatives in Salt Lake City, and then be on their way. From California they will sail to Honolulu and then take a clipper on to their destination. They are planning to stay there three weeks and then start back to America, on their way to England.

Meanwhile, she's enjoying the sights of Washington, and meeting a few of our local celebrities at small, informal, and very much off-the-record social gatherings. She and her husband will be here until Monday, when they will start West . . . to visit the East.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

WHEN SOMEBODY replies, on being asked what her business is, "I'm a lobbyist," the effect is rather disarming. One somehow expects members of this profession to be more subtle about it.

DUDLEY HARMON

Of course, our particular lobbyist is a very attractive and disarming person, anyway. She is Jane Grant, well known writer and co-founder of the New Yorker Magazine, with her former husband, Harold Ross. Miss Grant (a Lucy Stoner) has been here for a few days this week as the guest of Mrs. Sidney Lee. She buttonholed Senators and Representatives for hours in the interests of her cause, which is equal rights for women.

The other afternoon, when the conversation turned to this subject, several women were surprised to learn that there are more than 1,000 laws in the United States discriminating against them. They crept away feeling as though they were completely dominated by millions of Oriental-minded men. For example, they learned that in some States women can't sign contracts without their husband's consent; aren't allowed to work at night in others, etc.

MISS GRANT also points out that equal rights should mean equal right for men, too. Why, she asks, shouldn't the gentlemen be entitled to alimony, too? "After all," she laughs, "When a man has given a woman the best years of his life."

At this point a masculine guest chipped in with: "Yes, when you consider that the women control most of the wealth, it seems only fair that we should get the alimony."

MISS GRANT, slender, dark-haired, with a very gentle manner, looks like anything but a woman with a cause. She started her career doing society notes for the New York Times. During her twelve years with the Times she was absent only one day. Later she traveled all over the world in search of stories. She was the first woman to interview Henry Pu-yi, the puppet emperor of Manchukuo.

Jane Grant has given up her writing, in favor of running her house in Litchfield, Conn., and working for the equal rights bill.

DR. AND MRS. Foster Kennedy came down from New York yesterday long enough to give a dinner last night. Their guests included the British Minister and Lady Campbell, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. A. A. Berle, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Robert Pell and Edward Weintal.

Mr. Weintal, who is Polish, and Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, the French journalist, will speak in a joint radio broadcast April 1 at 9:30 p. m. Their program will be sponsored by the Department of Justice and the topic will be that current favorite, "Democracy."

NEW ADDITION at the Polish Embassy staff is George Wendolowski ("some people think it's Mr. Whisky, he says plaintively). Mr. Wendolowski was with the Polish consulate in New York, then resigned to go into Wall Street, and is now back in the diplomatic service.

RUSSIAN-BORN, an American citizen, married to a Pole, and a designer of French clothes is Countess Ilynska. She will be down from New York next week to make final plans for the benefit fashion show at the Brazilian Embassy, March 27.

Bill Would Bar Ceiling on Child Welfare Grants

A bill to establish a system of aid to dependent children in Washington on a unified basis and without the present ceiling on payments was introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee.

The measure, which has the support of the welfare department, would eliminate the present dual system of providing aid for dependent children under direct home care appropriations and as a part of the public assistance program.

The welfare board would be authorized to administer the act and to provide every dependent child "with a reasonable subsistence compatible with decency and health."

Approximately 1,000 families with dependent children are now cared for from District and Social Security Administration funds, but monthly payments are limited to $24 for the mother and $6 for each child. Average payments are $40 a family.

A dependent child is defined in the Randolph bill as one "under age of 18 who has been deprived of parental support or care by reason of death, continued absence from home, or physical or mental incapacity of parent" and who lives with a relative.

Congress would be authorized to make whatever appropriations the board finds necessary first in the annual District supply bill and subsequently in deficiency acts.

The 1942 District budget carries $155,000 for aid for dependent children under public assistance. Of this, the United States would pay $62,000. Under home care $287,540 is scheduled, of which the United States would pay $155,000.

Boys' Kidnaping Tale Stirs Town, Proves Fake

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., March 20. A youth's wild story of kidnap, robbery and ransom had the village of Kearneysville, near here, in a dither Monday night, but yesterday was disclosed to have been only the product of the boy's mind.

State police were called to investigate the case. The 14-year-old boy, a student in Shepherdstown High School, disappeared, leaving two notes for his parents. One was signed by himself, and said that he had been kidnaped. The other, printed to conceal the handwriting, purported to be from the kidnaper himself, and said that ransom negotiations would be undertaken later.

Waltz, driver of the machine, was imprisoned in the demolished car for 20 minutes before being extricated. He was treated in Middletown for lacerations. Grimes, at the Frederick City Hospital, has a lacerated throat.

State Trooper A. F. Anderson said he was pursuing the Waltz car for speeding when it careened off the highway.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

FIRST HAND information about the Duke and Duchess of Windsor is being dispensed in the Hunt country by Robert C. Winmill, of Clovelly Farm, Warrenton, and Alex Hagner, who recently returned from a trip to Nassau.

Interest in the former Wallis Warfield is high in Virginia, where she spent much of her time and also attended a camp that Miss Charlotte H. Noland organized at her home, Burrland, near Middleburg.

JUST AFTER their arrival in Nassau, where they put up at the British Colonial, Bobby Winmill received a call from the butler of the Duke and Duchess, who wished to know if Mr. Winmill was from Warrenton. When he said yes, the butler said the Duchess wished to have him call. Both Alex and Bobby thought someone had played a joke on them, as the invitation was so informally extended. To verify it Bobby called the house to inquire about it and, to his surprise, the butler who answered said: "Mr. Winmill, how are you sir? I am Marshall, formerly in the employ of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane."

MR. WINMILL paid his call and found the Duchess both charming and gracious. He said she asked about all of her friends in Virginia. She introduced Mr. Winmill to the Duke by saying: "David, this is an old friend from Warrenton, the place in Virginia you have heard me speak of so often."

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jenkins motored to Warrenton to spend the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Amory Carhart and attended the point to point races a few days ago. Mrs. Jenkins poured tea for Mrs. Harry Pool at the party she and Mr. Pool gave after the races.

ALSO ENTERTAINING after the races were Capt. and Mrs. Richard Kirkpatrick, who gave a party at their home, Twin Oakes, and Mrs. Joseph H. Dorst, who entertained at a large tea in honor of Mr. and Mrs. James Keith, of Fairfax Court House. Mr. and Mrs. Carhart gave a luncheon before the races for the judges and officials.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Abbott, of New York, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McGrath, in Warrenton. The Abbotts formerly owned a place in Warrenton and their many friends are always glad to see them back here.

Opportunity for Neighbors

Uncle Sam is looking for a chap who can blow his own horn—long and loud.

The Army recruiting station has sent out a call for a B-flat double bass horn player for the Twelfth Infantry Band at Arlington, Va.

The successful applicant will have a chance for plenty of tooting. He must enlist for three years.

Sorry, Midnight Is Closing Hour

All was quiet early today as Bernard Mizel counted the day's receipts at the Economy Wine and Liquor Store, 2000 Eighteenth Street Northwest.

Then there was a loud crash. Mizel threw the receipts under the counter and ducked. He looked up to see an auto in what had been the window on Vernon Street.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Defense hiring in Federal agencies during January maintained its record pace of more than 100 employes daily. The official record released today by the Civil Service Commission shows that the War and Navy Departments employed 3,000 new workers here during the month.

The net increase, however, was 2,614 as Postoffice reported a decrease of about 900, chiefly temporary employes hired during the Christmas rush. This brought the total number of departmental Federal employes here to another new high record of 158,587. It's estimated that there are 190,000 Government workers in the District of all classifications. That figure covers field employes stationed here such as Navy Yard workers. The Federal pay roll here during the month was $27,497,060, another record breaker.

Navy Secretary Frank Knox delights in telling a story that the President has accused him of introducing "booze" into the Navy. Everyone enjoys the story, with the possible exception of the man who is the butt of the joke, Edward G. Booz. Booz is an efficiency expert who was brought here from Chicago by Knox to speed up Navy procedures. One of his recommendations that has been placed into effect was the establishment of a budget and statistical division

There are going to be some changes made in the old Defense Commission setup. At least several top administrative experts are working on plans that would:

1. Merge Leon Henderson's price stabilization division with the consumer division which is headed by Harriett Elliott. Also under consideration is a recommendation to give the merged division broad powers to control prices. No one seems to know who would head the new division, though Henderson is expected to be given the chance to refuse it. Henderson may go back to SEC as a full-time commissioner.

2. Abolish farm products division under Chester C. Davis and transfer its activities to the Agriculture Department. At the department it is anticipated that defense work will be centered under Milo Perkins, Surplus Marketing chieftain. Perkins is expected to get the huge job of buying food for the Allies. Davis is understood to have suggested that Perkins be given the assignment. The tip-off that the farm products division is due for a shift came from the fact that Davis has been appointed president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis and J. B. Hutson, his first assistant, is going back to Agriculture. Hutson was AAA assistant administrator. Another anticipated shift has the transportation division headed by Ralph Budd moving to OPM.

Peggy Holmead, OPM personnel chief, has the measles, of all things . . . OPM has added a night force temporarily to catch up with work in the file room . . . Revenue's Camera Club will meet tonight at 1741 K Street . . . OPM employes will set up a recreation association tonight. Fred Whetzel is acting chairman . . . Sidney Hillman is widely advertised as the labor boss of OPM. To people the country over this means that Hillman can get them a job, in either Government or industry. As a result, hundreds of letters are written daily to Hillman by persons asking for jobs. It takes a crew of eight girls just to answer the letters. The names are sent to the Civil Service Commission and the Employment Service.

The demand for card punch operators is at its height, but 25 who have notoriously bad records will be dismissed next week by Census. Meantime, the bureau doesn't find it necessary to fire many of its temporary employes. There are so many resignations that there is no need to discharge workers. Punch card operators are paid different salaries by Census. Those whose name is reached on the Civil Service register are paid $1,440. The others are paid base salaries of $1,260. A quota system permits each operator to earn more than his base salary.

Employes for the new super Mediation Board will be recruited by OPM . . . OPM's labor division probably will have a hand in the recruiting. It has a new personnel expert, Rolland Severy, who came here from the Civil Service Assembly. Severy formerly worked in the HOLC personnel office. The labor division has about 200 employes here and more than 500 persons in the field who are working without pay on a part-time basis. No large expansion is immediately planned.

C. J. Mack Chosen Mayflower Manager

C. J. (Neal) Mack, who has been associated with the Hotel Mayflower in executive capacities since before the opening in 1925, yesterday was named manager to succeed the late Ralph L. Pollio. For the last six years he has been executive assistant manager and was Pollio's "right-hand man" in administrative matters. He previously served as comptroller and chief accountant.

MACK

Mack is the Mayflower's oldest employe in point of service. He arrived on the scene before the doors had opened 16 years ago to participate in the organization of accounting and control departments. In selecting Mack, the board of directors followed the established policy of promoting from within the organization, the hotel announced.

The new manager is president of the Cosmopolitan Club of Washington, a member of the Washington Board of Trade and Columbia Country Club, and director of the Merrick Boys Club. Shortly after coming here from his home in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to join the Mayflower, he was married to Helen Leffingwell. They have two children—Marilyn, 11, and John, 5.

Overton Asks Square Deal For District

Urges Permanent Lump-Sum Plan, Charges Taxation Facts Are Ignored

No satisfactory settlement of the annual wrangle over the Federal Government's share of the District budget can be expected if Congress bases the solution only on its desire to meet fiscal demands of the defense emergency, Senator John H. Overton, chairman of the District appropriations subcommittee, told the Washington Board of Trade last night.

"I say to you that if we are going to end this seemingly endless wrangling . . . the solution must be based on sound measures that will endure throughout the years," the Louisianan declared.

Overton, for more than two years stanch advocate of a formula that would base the Federal-District fiscal relationship upon a determination of the ratio of Federal-owned land to that owned by the city, called attention of the gathering in the Mayflower Hotel to his Senator's oath to support the Constitution.

Bound by His Oath

The Constitution, he pointed out, makes Congress responsible for the affairs of the District and that therefore his oath bound him to conscientious consideration of the city's needs. Then he said:

"I for one feel that I am as much a Senator from the District of Columbia as I am a Senator from Louisiana."

"If we stand together and fight together," he added, "this unrepresented portion of the U. S. A. will get just treatment by Congress."

In response to a glowing tribute to his interest in the District, paid him by James E. Colliflower, board president, Overton gave assurance that he would continue to be the "justest friend of the District within the limitations of my ability."

Senator Overton said he expected to bring a bill embodying his fiscal formula to the Senate floor soon. Pointing out that the formula has been passed three times by the Senate and each time rejected by the House, Overton expressed the hope that this time it would be adopted by "both houses."

Members Ignore Facts

Despite Census Bureau data showing the contrary, Overton complained, many members of Congress continue to insist that the Capital is undertaxed compared with cities of similar size.

Speaking of the city's need for additional funds, the Senator declared:

"I entertain the view that the Appropriation Committee could judiciously spend on buildings and equipment in Washington $10,000,000 more than is now being spent."

The meeting was marked by annual presentation of awards to members of the Police and Fire Departments for heroic and meritorious service during 1940. But the proudest individual concerned in the presentation was not one of the recipients.

Father Pins Medal on Son

He was Capt. Jeremiah Sullivan, of the Second Precinct, who was called from the audience by Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the award committee, to pin the gold medal, highest police award, on the uniform of his son, Priv. Thomas C. Sullivan, of the First Precinct. Capt. Sullivan, member of the department for more than 30 years, said:

"This is the happiest night of my life. I appreciate from the bottom of my heart that you have chosen for this honor the only boy I have—Tom."

Award recipients in the Fire Department were Priv. James M. Cox, No. 29 Engine Company, gold medal; Priv. James M. Lowrey, No. 2 Engine Company, silver medal; Priv. George A. Clark, No. 4 Truck Company, bronze bar, and Priv. Ernest J. Mueller, No. 4 Truck; Priv. James F. Walters, jr., No. 4 Truck, and Sergt. John R. Barry, No. 10 Engine, honorable mention.

Other police awards went to Private Charles A. Scott, traffic division, silver medal; Private Charles Burns, Second Precinct, bronze bar, and Private Lloyd L. Clair, Twelfth Precinct; Private Clifton G. Edwards, Second Precinct, and Private Clifton W. Disney, Seventh Precinct, honorable mention.

In an address covering civil aspects of national defense, Frank Bane, director of the State and local cooperation division of the Defense Commission, called attention to the need for keeping rents "as close as possible to normal rates."

Recital to Aid British Charms D. C. Audience

By Ray C. B. Brown.

British Relief Society presents Kirstine Nielsen, soprano; Louise Behrend, violin, and Dorcey Smith, piano, Thursday night in Pierce Hall in a joint recital for the benefit of the Myra Hess Fund for British Musicians. Program of music by British composers, including Richard Jones, Henry Bishop, Benjamin Britten, Frederick Delius, Herbert Howells, Arthur Benjamin, Granville Bantock, Frank Bridge and John Ireland.

While the Myra Hess Fund for British Musicians was the beneficiary of last evening's recital in Pierce Hall by Kirstine Nielsen, Louise Behrend and Dorcey Smith, there were esthetic benefits as well for the auditors, whose acquaintance with the music of some British composers was considerably enlarged. It is not often that so novel and interesting a program comes the way of the concert-goer and the critic. With chronological compression one was introduced to Richard Jones, a contemporary of Sebastian Bach, as well as to Benjamin Britten, who is only 27.

BROWN

Of the artists who provided the evening's enjoyment, Kirstine Nielsen alone was a newcomer, and one hopes that she will be heard here again. Louise Behrend, a native of the District of Columbia, and Dorcey Smith, a Texan, have given recitals here before, and proved themselves musicians of talent and growing promise. Each endowed with insight and zest, they make an excellent team, and they share an interest in modern music.

Miss Nielsen, a singer of Danish birth, had three groups of songs. In the first were three early English anonymous lyrics and Bainbridge Crist's arrangement of Henry Bishop's "Should He Upbraid." In the second violin obbligati were interwoven in Benjamin Britten's "Underneath the Abject Willow," Frederick Delius' "The Streamlet's Slumber Song" and Herbert Howells' "The Tinker's Song."

Granville Bantock and Frank Bridge were represented in the third group, the former by "Silent Strings" and "A Feast of Lanterns," and the latter by "Come To Me In My Dreams" and "Love Went A-Riding." Miss Nielsen's readings were intelligent in treatment and artistic in phrasing. Her fresh and attractive voice has remarkable purity and resonance. If one was correctly informed that she was formerly a contralto, the change in tessitura would account for occasional uncertainties in tone placement.

Miss Behrend and Miss Smith opened the recital with a sonata by Richard Jones.

Miss Smith contributed a suite by Arthur Benjamin notable for originality and poetic content.

The recital closed with John Ireland's compelling A minor sonata for piano and violin, a work rich in ideas and warm in inspiration.

Oft-Delayed Mass. Ave. Span To Open Apr. 5

The $500,000 Massachusetts Avenue Bridge over Rock Creek, due to have been completed January 20, will be opened to traffic by April 5, Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst said yesterday.

Traffic will be routed over the south portion of the span, which will be paved first, he said. The detour bridge contains many utilities, such as telephone cables, electric conduits and the like, which will be placed along the north portion of bridge while the detour bridge is in process of demolition. When this is completed the paving on the north side will be undertaken and the entire span finished in another month.

On three different occasions the District Commissioners have extended the completion date from the original date, January 20, due to labor shortages. Many carpenters were taken from the job for the work at the Arlington Cantonment.

At present the Commissioners are in the process of making a fourth extension. Ordinarily, contractors are charged a stipulated sum of money for each day over the agreed completion date. In this case, however, no penalties have been affixed against the company. The company, Potts & Callahan, of this city, "has made an earnest effort to finish up on time; they've done everything in the world, even worked nights," Capt. Whitehurst said.

Concrete was poured on the deck slab of the bridge yesterday so that it is now possible to walk clear across the span on the south side.

Capt. Whitehurst also said the job of paving Massachusetts Avenue, Wisconsin Avenue to California Street, will be begun about March 31. All of the curbing and gutters between Wisconsin Avenue and Thirteenth Street will be whitened and the street constructed of darkened concrete.

To prevent side-wiping of automobiles along the curve at Observatory Circle, Capt. Whitehurst said a raised center island, 3 feet wide and 3 inches high, will be constructed.

Cayton Assails Wage Seizures By Creditors

Judge Nathan Cayton yesterday asserted the authority of the small claims branch of the Municipal Court to discourage what he termed harsh practices of creditors.

Regal Clothing Co., Inc., obtained judgment for $27.94 against Hilton McKay, East Riverdale, Md., but Judge Cayton ordered that he be permitted to pay the judgment at $2 a week. The firm's seizure of McKay's wages before trial was called "an extreme measure" by Judge Cayton, who ruled that the firm itself would have to pay the costs of the seizure.

The Regal firm also obtained judgment of $47.75 against William Webster, Silver Spring, Md., after tying up $63.85 of his wages by an attachment before trial. Judge Cayton released the money and ordered that Webster pay $2 a week.

To allow the attachments to stand, said Judge Cayton in an opinion, "would be unduly harsh and would serve to encourage a practice which I frankly feel should be discouraged in every proper manner. Wage earners should not have to live in constant fear of having their pay envelopes seized without warning. Their jobs should not be put in jeopardy by vexing methods of this sort. They should not be subject to be stricken without warning and seemingly left with no available defense. They should be assured that the court will find a way to protect them from oblique assaults of this kind."

Counsel for the company indicated that an appeal might be taken.

Reports Due On Building Site Today

Park Commission To Meet After Inspecting Area In Prince Georges

National Capital Park and Planning Commission findings on utility, traffic, private housing and other conditions near the site of the proposed Government office building development at the corner of Suitland and Silver Hill Roads, Prince Georges County, are expected at a meeting of the commission today.

A dozen members of the commission yesterday made a survey of the vicinity of the 450-acre site of nine contemplated Federal office structures, which are expected to furnish working space for upward of 60,000 defense employes.

They considered such factors as: Highway conditions and possible traffic repercussions of the vast construction project; light, sewer, water and other utility services; availability of private residential housing for the influx of workers, and present volume of population of the area.

Those making the inspection trip were Frederic A. Delano, commission chairman; Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks; Col. E. E. Gesler, representing the Chief of Army Engineers; Henry V. Hubbard, J. C. Nichols and William A. Delano, commission members from Cambridge, Mass.; Kansas City, Mo., and New York, respectively, and the following local members: John Nolen, jr., T. S. Settle, Norman C. Brown and T. C. Jeffers.

Earlier yesterday 7½ acres of land fronting 700 feet of the 4400 block of Massachusetts Avenue Northwest were acquired for a public recreation area by the commission, it was announced.

The land adjoins five acres recently acquired by the District Commissioners for a school site.

The related school and recreation project is a good example of joint planning and purchasing by the Commissioners and the Park and Planning Commission, according to Brown, associate land-purchasing officer of the commission, who made the announcement of the land acquisition.

An 11-acre tract north of Good Hope Road, at the intersection of Alabama Avenue Southeast, also is being purchased, the commission announced. This area, which is to be preserved in its natural state and open to pedestrians only, is to be known as Fort Baker Valley Park.

Two and a half acres in Northeast, near the District line, also are being acquired toward completion of the Watts Branch Parkway project, a parkway and flood prevention development.

Tanker Torpedoed Without Warning, Skipper Says

Bayonne, N. J., March 20 (AP).—Capt. Eric Blomquist, arriving in this port today with 21 other survivors, from his Standard Oil tanker Charles Pratt, said the vessel was "torpedoed without warning" off Free Town, British Africa, last December 21.

"The first torpedo hit amidships on the starboard side at No. 6 tank and oil was blown several hundred feet in the air," Blomquist said. "I ordered the steam turned on in an effort to put out the fire that followed but the steam lines were damaged."

Shortly afterward, the captain recounted, "I gave orders to abandon ship and when the lifeboat I was in was about 200 yards from the Pratt, the second torpedo hit." Blomquist resides in Severn, Md.

Army Approves Meade Boards On Promotions

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 20.—Nine boards to examine more than 300 officers of the Twenty-ninth Division recommended for promotion were approved today by the Second Army Corps. One board, to consider recommendations for promotion of senior officers, includes Maj. Samuel T. Taggart, of Washington, medical officer of the 104th Quartermaster Regiment. The board for engineer officers is composed entirely of District men.

They are:

Col. John W. Oehmann, Maj. Ralph S. Childs, Maj. Frederick D. Suttenfield, Medical Corps; Capt. Samuel R. Turner and Capt. Pearson C. Conlyn, all of the 121st Engineers. Maj. John T. O'Neill, of Washington, is a member of the board to examine quartermaster officers.

Lieut. Col. Peyton G. Nevitt, of Washington, division adjutant general, and Maj. Joseph P. Franklin, of Cumberland, Md., are members of the miscellaneous board.

The nine boards will begin consideration of recommendations at once. Such recommendations already have been sent to division headquarters by regimental and brigade commanders.

Fifty-seven new men were added to the District's Twenty-ninth Signal Company today after Capt. Donald A. Falk, commanding, examined 60 soldiers sent on requisition from the division's three field artillery regiments. Each of the four infantry regiments will send 20 men each for conversion into military police.

Two District physicians were among 22 medical reserve officers ordered to duty April 1 to fill the need for doctors in the Twenty-ninth. Two others were ordered to report the same day for active service with the 1,322d Service Unit Regular Army, at Meade.

Transfers in the 104th Quartermaster Regiment, announced yesterday, include that of Lieut. Hugh A. Allen, jr., of Washington, to regimental headquarters as transportation officer.

The selectees from the iDstrict area were among 67 sent to replacement centers and tactical organizations of the Army, the recruit reception center announced today. They are George M. Summers, of Frederick, Md., sent to the quartermaster replacement center at Camp Lee, Va., and Jack Blakeney, of Frederick, to the Coast Artillery replacement center at Camp Wallace, Tex.

Local Boards Get First April Draft Quotas

Washington Selective Service headquarters yesterday announced the number of trainees each Washington local board must furnish for the first District requisition in April of 280, April 11-20, inclusive.

At the same time officials made public the names of 65 colored men who will be inducted today at Baltimore.

While two boards, Nos. 17 and 21, have been called on to furnish some 30 recruits for the initial April call, four boards were exempted from selecting candidates in this requisition.

These, Nos. 12, 23, 24 and 25, will be counted on for proportionately heavier contingents in future requisitions, it was understood.

Meanwhile, National Selective Service headquarters called reports of second registration day for men becoming 21 since last October 16 "merely speculative." A second registration day will be necessary but no "formal conversations" have been held, it was said.

The breakdown of the initial April requisition by local boards follows: No. 1, 18; No. 2, 7; No. 3, 15; No. 4, 1; No. 5, 1; No. 6, 4; No. 7, 23; No. 8, 4; No. 9, 30; No. 10, 25; No. 11, 20; No. 12, 0; No. 13, 10; No. 14, 6; No. 15, 13; No. 16, 5; No. 17, 30; No. 18, 15; No. 19, 3; No. 20, 10; No. 21, 30; No. 22, 8; No. 23, 0; No. 24, 0, and No. 25, 0.

Leaders Oppose Food for France

New York, March 20 (INS).—A group of distinguished Americans tonight appealed to Secretary of State Hull in an open letter to issue a warning to the Nation against "Nazi-inspired propaganda" aimed at convincing the United States it should persuade Britain to relax its blockade and permit food shipments to France.

The letter says in part:

"Let us not be distracted . . . by being soft where we should be firm; let us not play into the hands of our enemies by urging our friends to yield to the persuasion of those who would betray our cause."

It recites how French industries are now working for the Nazis, how the Nazis have taken foodstuffs and wheat from unoccupied France. Among the signers of the letter are Marshall Field, New York publisher; President John G. Jackson of the New York Bar Association; Dean James M. Landis of Harvard Law School; Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College; Robbert E. Sherwood, playwright; Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, Gen. John F. O'Ryan, Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier Journal.

A. F. L. Painters Ban Defense Strikes

New York, March 20 (AP).—The Painting and Decorating Contractors of America and the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers (A. F. L.) signed a national labor agreement today prohibiting strikes and lockouts on defense jobs.

The union, with 125,000 members, also pledged that it would not raise wage rates after a defense project started, and would not increase dues and initiation fees.

Gonzaga High Bows to La Salle in Tourney

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 20.—It is possible to build up a powerful case for the Yankees in any debate about the 1941 American League pennant race. The Cleveland Indians are supposed to be the favorites, but there are weighty arguments in favor of the Yanks if the pennant is a topic.

POVICH

For the sake of the discussion, it can be noted that the Tigers are being tossed out of the reckoning despite the fact they still hold the title. With the Army draft threatening to strike Hank Greenberg out of the Detroit lineup, and the Tigers' ancient infield a year older, Detroit is being written off as a possible repeater. Which narrows the pennant debate to the Indians who finished second last year and the Yanks who finished third, only two games out of the lead.

It is pertinent to recall that the Yankees finished only two games behind the Tigers despite the absence of Joe DiMaggio from the lineup with an injury for 18 consecutive games early in the season. It is safe to say that somewhere along the line during those 18 games, DiMaggio's bat would have picked up those two vital Yankee victories. The Yanks won't be missing DiMag at the start of this season.

The Yankee-baiters are now taking comfort in the thought that Manager Joe McCarthy is gambling too heavily on his infield, composed of two rookies who have never played in the big leagues, a second baseman who is playing first base, and third baseman Red Rolfe, lone relic of the Yanks' 1940 infield lineup. But that may be wishful thinking.

No doit is Joe McCarthy. If he has deemed that second baseman Joe Gordon will be an adequate-enough first baseman then the chances are that Joe Gordon will be a pretty good first baseman. Because McCarthy is no green hand at converting ball players. Red Rolfe was a shortstop when he came up from Newark to the Yankees. McCarthy made him play third base and saw him blossom as the best third baseman in the league.

The evidence is that McCarthy has an especial insight about infielders. He used to be one himself. The fact that he couldn't hit a lick kept him out of the big leagues as a player. Eleven years ago, Ben Chapman came up to the Yankees as a thirdbaseman. As far as McCarthy was concerned, Chapman was no third baseman. He didn't have the snap throw so necessary for an infielder. So McCarthy told Chapman he was an outfielder, and a pretty good big league outfielder Chapman has been for 11 years.

Another manager might have been tempted to bench Frankie Crosetti when he was hitting only .197 last season, but McCarthy didn't. He had the proper appreciation for Crosetti's defense play However, McCarthy is now willing to turn the shortstop job over to Phil Rizzuto, which is high recommendation for the little Italian from Kansas City.

The Yanks' manager, who has made precious few mistakes with infielders, said in one of his rare interviews the other day: "You can go out on the limb on this Yankee infield as it now stands. Gordon will do all right at first base. Priddy and Rizzuto can't miss. I'm not worrying about my infield and anybody that does is borrowing trouble for us."

It's sane sort of logic that has moved McCarthy to convert Gordon into a first baseman. "He's just simply a swell ball player," says the Yankee manager. "I'll bet he could play the outfield or catch better than a lot of them in this league. I've probably been wasting him on second base. The place to put Gordon is where he'll handle the ball the most times and that's first base. He's one of those rare guys who can play great ball anywhere."

If there is any break-down in the Yankees' infield it is very apt to be at third base. Red Rolfe appears to be growing old beyond his years, and is coming up with aches and pains that make the daily grind an ordeal. But McCarthy is prepared for any such eventuality as a slump by Rolfe. He'll move his darling, Gordon, over to third base and let Tommy Henrich or Johnny Sturm play first base.

As between the Indians and the Yankees, who finished only a game apart, the Yanks appear to be the most improved ball club by far. Cleveland's great bid for additional strength has taken the form of acquiring Gerald Walker in a swap for Frankie Pytlak. Walker replaces Ben Chapman in the Cleveland outfield. That may be an all-out effort to win the pennant as Cleveland sees it, but from here it seems feeble, indeed.

Still Following That Man:

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

I was doing my roadwork, my daily wobble down Fourteenth Street from the Capital Garage to The Post Building, and I was thinking about something to write. Tell the truth I felt one of my Little Potatoes pieces coming on. (It's a spud with a thud, Boss, and I'll let you have it someday soon.) Then I half way decided to give you some of those poetic tidbits from the Walter Haight Club contest. I shook off that idea because I had done a contest letter earlier in the week.

HAIGHT

Finally I simmered down the field to essays on (1) lovely little Claudia and (2) self-service grocery stores and it looked as if Claudia was going to win me over when I looked up and found myself following a square-shouldered bow-legged man.

Did you ever get a self-conscious feeling, Boss, while walking the same direction as another person? Well, anyway for a half block it seemed that I couldn't get rid of this man. I tried to walk fast and go to his left and he swung in. I made a move to go to the outside and he moved toward the curb.

So I decided to stop and look in the window of a shoe store. I counted ten and then went on and darned if he hadn't been doing the same thing. There I was right behind him again.

When we got to Starling Avenue he went straight ahead and I made the left turn toward The Post Building. It's a funny thing, but somehow I felt as if I wanted to follow. I caught a side view of his face and I had to laugh. The man I had been following was Corporation Counsel Richmond Keech, one of those freaks called a native Washingtonian.

I was sorry I hadn't recognized him because we could have discussed, as we generally do, those dear dead days, almost beyond recall, when we were on the old Business High football squad.

As I stood watching him, it all came to me why I felt as if an unseen magnet were making me follow him.

Keech was our regular fullback and he was just about the roughest, toughest conglomeration of flesh, muscle and bone that ever saw action in a local high school series.

Bullet Keech, we called him.

Well, Keech was No. 1 fullback. Cotton Noonan was No. 2 fullback. I was No. 3 fullback. The year before I had been waterboy, but I missed seeing several important plays by going to the pump to fill my bucket and so I "came out" for the team. New, Boss, No. 3 fullback on high school teams seldom are diked out a la Esquire. I had a moth-eaten orange and blue jersey, a pair of pants several sizes too large with "push me hard" painted on the rear, and a pair of shoulder pads that stuck out like a couple of verandas.

At the first practice, Coach White said, "Now listen, Haight, I want you and Noonan to follow Keech wherever he goes. I want you to digest every word of instruction I give him. You fellows will have to be ready to take his place if anything happens to him. Get the idea?"

Well, Boss, we followed Keech. In fact, Noonan and I haunted Keech. We listened closely when his signal was called. We repeated it over and over. We watched him shift and we made a mental note of his each and every move. It was sort of "Three Men On a Position," Boss.

Well, the early season games began. That Keech was a horse for work. It looked like he never would get knocked out so Noonan and I could get a chance. I felt like a traitor, but I used to find myself sitting on the bench hoping that Keech would get a slight sprain or something and then Noonan would get a "Charley horse."

Coach White finally allowed Noonan to play and I took over the fullback for five minutes in the last quarter against Charlotte Hall. This was an "outside" game, not counting in the championship series.

Well, Boss, the series battles started. Noonan took Keech's place occasionally, but I sat on the bench, my school spirit at the boiling point, but my activity at zero.

Came the final game of the year with Central. I longed for some break that might put me into the game.

The sun was edging behind the stands and my hopes were going with it. I was huddled in a blanket, still watching Keech's every move, as if it were the first practice of the season.

"Haight!" It was Coach White's voice. I popped out of that blanket and landed at his side like an excited frog.

The coach was looking at the field and without turning his head, he said, "Haight, I want you to go in there and take Keech's fullback. After the first play, I want you to tell Ray Culligan to punt."

He turned to me and said, "Now get in there and fight, kid!" and with that he gave me a vigorous slap on the back. I made a break to go on the field, but he grabbed me by the jersey. "Wait a minute, Haight," he said, feeling around my shoulders, "you haven't got on any shoulder pads."

o+o

"I gave them to Nate Oscar, the subguard, like you told me to at the half," I replied rather mournfully.

"Change with him quickly," snapped the coach.

I was standing beside Coach White a minute later, tucking my jersey in my pants when he said, "O. K. Haight, now get in there right after this play."

I bit down on my noseguard and pawed the ground with my cleats. The few fleeting seconds of that play seemed like eternity. In my eagerness to get in there—to fight, fight, fight for old Business—I found myself on the field and racing toward the referee like a young tiger gone beserk.

"Bang!" came a loud report.

The game was over.

Always your ace,

FATBACK HAIGHT.

Tabor Breaks Rules, Gets Suspension

JIM TABOR

Manager Cronin Angry at Red Sox Third Baseman

By the Associated Press

Sarasota, Fla., March 20.—Jim Tabor, hard hitting third baseman of the Boston Red Sox, was suspended indefinitely today by Manager Joe Cronin for "repeated violation of training rules."

Until further notice Lou Finney, the club's handy man, will be the regular third sacker, Cronin declared.

"Tabor hasn't had the best interests of the club at heart," Cronin declared angrily at a press conference late today.

"He has repeatedly ignored warnings and broken training rules. He appeared at practice this morning and asked to be excused. I'm fed up with him."

Cronin refused to go into the matter in further detail but said that from here on he'd be satisfied to go along with Finney at third base.

Tabor has been in hot water with club officials on several previous occasions.

Boston Wins Hockey Series Opener, 3-0

By the United Press

Boston, March 20.—The Boston Bruins, skating like dervishes and checking with terrific force, blanked the Toronto Maple Leafs, 3-0, in the opener of their best-of-seven series to determine a Stanley Cup finalist before 16,100 fans at Boston Garden tonight.

Beaten but once in 33 starts, the National Hockey League champions have a big advantage in their struggle to regain the Stanley Cup.

With both sides playing a man short, the Bruins counted their initial marker at 15:33 of the second period when Bill (Flash) Hollett blasted a 25-foot center alley drive past Goalie Walter Broda.

Reardon worked inside the Toronto defense line in the third period with both clubs again having only five players and collected the puck from Art Jackson to beat Broda from close-up with a corner shot at 18:11.

Eddie Wiseman counted the third marker on a backhander at 19:24.

Canadiens Bow To Black Hawks

Chicago, March 20 (U.P.).—The Chicago Black Hawks tonight defeated the Montreal Cansdiens, 2 to 1, to take a one-game lead in the "C" series of the Stanley Cup playoffs before 12,306, at the Chicago Stadium.

Each team tallied in the opening period. In the third period Doug Bentley stole the puck from Jack Portland in the Canadiens' territory and passed to Mush March, who re-

Purple Five Loses, 45-26, To N. Y. Club

Washington Team Trails Throughout; Opposition Gets Hot In Last Quarter

By Bill Burnett

A Staff Correspondent

Newport, R. I., March 20.—The tallest team in the annual Eastern States Catholic Invitation Basketball Tournament abruptly shut off any hopes Gonzaga High quintet, of Washington, had of grabbing an out-of-town title here today when La Salle Academy, of New York City, ground out a 45-26 victory over the Purple in the first game of the three-day tourney.

The Metropolitan champions of the District of Columbia never seriously threatened after the first few minutes of their losing effort, although they weren't really whipped until the last quarter. In that one they were held to 7 points while a white-hot combination bearing the Metropolitan New York title poured a dazzling succession of 17 into the cords.

Franny Counselman, Gozaga's high scorer, continued in his usual role with 9 points, but the winners' Charley Verschurren took honors for the game with 11 and his mate, Billy Burke, also beat Counselman with 10 counters.

All but one of the eight players used by La Salle, which has been beaten only once this year in 17 games, helped out in the scoring. Averaging 6 feet 1, the New Yorkers clearly had the jump on Gonzaga, but their victory was a plain case of one club outplaying another.

La Salle Takes Lead

With the start of the game it already appeared, the boys from "Swampoodle" were due to be the victims of as severe a lacing as they have ever suffered. The New Yorkers' Schneider got himself fouled while shooting by Bernie Nolan on the first play of the game and with horrible rapidity La Salle ran up a 9-0 score before Gonzaga tallied. The latters' shots were looping the rim and ducking out.

Finally Nolan brought Washington its first counter when he dropped one of the two tosses allowed him on Burkee's holding. Shortly afterward Counselman sneaked under and brought the count to 9-3 but that was the Purple's last point in the opening period. The score at the end was 12-3.

Though Gonzaga chiseled its deficit to a mere five points early in the second period, the difference between the clubs was practically the same at the timer's gun. A 23-13 count separated the fives. The D. C. contingent was still having trouble with all its shots, and its floor game was shoddy and nervous. La Salle, on the other hand, worked smoothly, using a series of set plays and "sneakers" to hold its advantage.

Purple Bows Out

There was still hope for Washington's representative after another quarter had been played, that big nine points with which La Salle started hostilities still hanging over Gonzaga's head at 28-19. Nolan, O'Lone and Counselman contributed to the losers' total during a slow but interesting period.

Then, however, came the deluge. And Washington's five, apparently favored by the 1,000 fans, bowed out after a valiant try, leaving the District's record clean of titles in the nine-year history of the event, four having been held in this quaint town.

As planned before they left their home grounds, Gonzaga's players will remain for the duration of the tourney despite their downfall. They will arrive by train in Washington sometime Sunday.

In other first round games today, the defending champion home club, De La Salle Academy tripped Chaminade of Mineola, Long Island, 37-30. Central Catholic of Pittsburgh routed Benedictine of Richmond 43-27, and Joliet (Ill.) Catholic defeated Trenton (N. J.) Catholic, 47-36.

Dean to Face Tigers Today In Exhibition

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 20.—They are throwing Jim (Dopey) Dean at the Tigers tomorrow and if he emerges with any honor at all he will probably find himself an accredited member of the Washington pitching staff.

The 6-foot-4-inch eccentric from Aragon, Ga., who packs all the color owned by the 1941 Nats, is highly regarded thus far by the Nats' bosses and Bucky Harris is a bit on the impatient side to learn to what extent he can rely on Dean. Thus the assignment for him to tackle the lusty-swinging Tigers tomorrow at Tinker Field.

Dean will pitch the first five innings of the game, in which Dutch Leonard will work the last four for the Nats. For Bucky Harris it will be an interesting affair insofar as Dean is concerned. He will be watching not only the success or failure of the new knuckler Dean has acquired, but he will know also to what extent Dean has improved his fast ball.

Harris for the past two weeks has been working patiently with Dean and is at the point of believing that he has increased the speed and effectiveness of the big fellow's fast ball. Dean came to camp as a square-stance pitcher, and Harris has been pleading with him to make more of a pivot in his delivery.

Dean Changes Style

The Nats' manager has advised Dean to adopt the pitching motion of big Fred Marberry, who got his speed from a pivot. Like Marberry, Dean is now lifting his left leg high during his wind-up, and his fast ball has been knocking the mitts off the catchers' hands in practice.

Harris has no worries about Dean's own confidence in himself. The big Georgian has no inhibitions. He demonstrated that fright is far from his mind when, against the

Louis Meets Abe Simon In 15th Title Defense

Heavyweight Champion Meets Biggest Foe in Detroit Tonight; 15,000 Expected

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, March 20.—Joe Louis, the wrecking crew for heavyweights of assorted shapes and sizes, goes to work tomorrow night on the biggest target he has ever had as champion.

Putting his title on the line for the fifteenth time, the Brown Bomber moves into the Olympia to take on 250-pound Abraham Simon, New York giant who boasts a foot that's wider than old Primo Carnera's "satchels," a hand bigger than any fighter in the ring, a cocky confidence—and not much more.

The bout is scheduled for 20 rounds, or less.

A crowd of more than 15,000, with a gross gate ringing the $50,000 bell, is expected by Promoter Mike Jacobs in this fourth stop on Louis' winter fight-a-month campaign which, up to now, has raised lumps on Al McCoy, Red Burman and Gus Dorazio.

Simon Likes Simon

Only Abe and his mouthpiece, Manager Joy Johnston, believe there's any chance for a miracle tomorrow night when the boys start pitching at 10 p. m. (E.S.T.).

This corner, having listened for hours to James Joy's arguments—you just can't escape the man—believes Abe may last five or six rounds, largely because he's just as strong as he looks.

Joe is really keen about getting this one over without any delay, because he has been reminded recently that he never has put on a typical bomber explosion for the home folk. Twice, before he was champion, he had to go 10 rounds with opponents here in his own backyard and in his last outing rapid Robert Pastor lasted 11 before the lights were turned out.

"Be Over Early"—Joe

"This time," Joe told his pals today, "I'm gonna let 'em see the real thing if I can."

As far as Joe is concerned, only the greatest optimists expect this stop on the winter-spring tour to get beyond the hair-mussing stage for him. After this one, the parade will move on to St. Louis for a meeting with Tony Musto on April 8, and then possibly to Washington in May so Joe may operate for the third time on Pastor. For June, it's still the super-colossal with Billy Conn.

The preliminary fireworks start popping at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow, with an 8-rounder between Benny Goldberg, a local southpaw bantamweight, and Irish Jimmy Gilligan, of Buffalo, N. Y.

The N. B. C. blue network will broadcast the fight, starting at 10 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Brewers Win Over Bruins By 50 to 42

Washington Brewers, American Professional League entry, opened the three-game city series with the Bruins, colored professional five, with a 50-to-42 victory last night before 1,200 fans in Riverside Stadium.

The Bruins, who compiled a winning streak against outside teams while playing in Turner's Arena, led, 22 to 21, with four minutes to play in the first half, but the Brewers took a 26-to-23 lead at intermission and increased the advantage through the final period.

Sidat Singh, the former all-round athlete at Syracuse, scored 12 points for the Bruins, but Tarzen Cooper, high-scoring forward, missed the contest as he was playing with the Renaissance in Chicago and could not get here in time.

Moe Dublilier, dropping pot shots from midcourt, and Nat Frankel led a Brewer charge early in the second half that boosted the score to 44-28. Tom Sealey dropped in eight consecutive points for the Bruins, but the host five stopped the rally here and won by the eight-point margin.

Dubilier scored 15 points and Frankel 13. Coach Mack Posnack was the only member of the winners who failed to hit the scoring column.

Cady's 218 Points Set New Record At Charlotte Hall

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., March 20.—Frank Cady, Charlotte Hall Military Academy's "Magician of the Maplewood," broke the all-time Academy basketball scoring record during the season by scoring 218 points in 20 games, breaking the old record of 199 points in 23 games, set by Mike Slaughter in 1937-38.

Cady, former star at St. John's Prep in Washington, D. C., performed in only 20 of his team's 23 games this year, making his record even more noteworthy. He averaged 10.9 points per battle, his best game from the scoring standpoint being against Boys' Latin School, of Baltimore, when he racked up 19 points.

Coach W. A. Stephens' Cadets wound up with a record of 15 wins and 8 defeats for the 1940-41 season, winning the mythical Maryland Military Schools title and winding up in third place in the Maryland Scholastic Conference.

Cady was named to the first All-Star team of the conference, while his teammate, Ernie Bowersox, who scored 171 points during the year to take second scoring honors, was named to the second All-Star team.

Beats Out Heafner After Bitter Duel Down Stretch; Latter Posts 280 Card

By Bill Boni.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 20.—In as near a thing to man-to-man combat as medal play golf can produce, Samuel Jackson Snead whipped Clayton Vance Heafner today and won the thirty-ninth annual North-South Open Golf Championship and first prize of $1,000.

Trailed by almost all the final day gallery of 4,000, these two big hitters traded birdie punches from start to finish of the last 18 holes, with Snead ultimately the winner by three strokes. His closing 69, 3 under par, gave him a total of 277, 11 under par for the 72 holes. Heafner fired his fourth consecutive 70 for 280.

Hogan "Forgotten Man"

Virtually unnoticed was the other man in this threesome, Ben Hogan. Just a year ago it was Hogan who set the tournament record that Snead tied today. This time Little Ben was out of the contention, his even-par 288 good enough only for a seventh-place tie with Lloyd Mangrum, of Oak Park, Ill., and $187.50.

Heafner got $600 for second place; Willie Goggin of White Plains, N. Y., with a 71 and 70 for 284, got third and $500 and the two United States champions, P. G. A. Titleholder Byron Nelson and Open Titleholder Lawson Little, finished all even at 285 and $350 each.

Snead, leader by four strokes at 36 holes, got to scrambling on this morning's third round and didn't recover until his margin had been cut in half. Back of him the positions had shifted, too, with Heafner replacing Nelson as the runner-up.

Fans Flock to Links

Thus the battle for top money was right there in the one pairing and the customers turned out in droves. For nine holes they saw the two fight on even terms, Snead shooting three birdies to match Heafner's two and an eagle 3 on the fourth hole.

On the tenth Snead went three shots in front as Heafner got into two traps and took a six. Heafner cut that to one stroke at the twelfth with a 15-foot birdie putt while Snead was going over the green and then chipping poorly. Came No. 15, and Snead made it two again, a trapped tee shot costing Heafner a stroke.

Both birdie the sixteenth and Heafner was left with two strokes to make up in the two holes to tie. He got one of them by rolling an

Rigney Placed In Class 4B In Selective Draft

By the Associated Press

Pasadena, Calif., March 20.—John Rigney, 26-year-old Chicago White Sox pitcher, was recommended for a class 4-B draft rating today after a physical examination disclosed that an old perforated right ear drum virtually disqualifies him for military service.

Rigney, now in spring training here, was examined by Drs. Z. T. Malaby and Newton Bobbitt, who said they would make their report to the pitcher's Chicago draft board.

The hurler, with the White Sox about four years, won 15 games last season.

Campbell's Single Spoils No-Hit Game

Brooklyn Makes 10 Hits; Feller Loses, 2-1, to Cardinals; Reds Defeat Giants

By the Associated Press

Lakeland, Fla., March 20.—Whitlow Wyatt and Fred Fitzsimmons, a pair of well-worn aces in the pitching pack of the Brooklyn Dodgers, held Detroit's American League champions to one lone single today for a 3-to-1 exhibition victory.

The hit by Bruce Campbell in the sixth inning, Wyatt's last on the mound, followed an error by Pee-wee Reese and accounted for the Tigers' run.

The Dodgers made 10 hits, one of them a single by Cookie Lavagetto with the bases loaded in the fifth.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 20 (AP).—Three rookie pitchers handcuffed the Cleveland Indians on two hits today while the St. Louis Cardinals were getting to Bobby Feller for a 2-to-1 victory in an exhibition game before 3,200 paid customers.

Feller, still far from his 1940 form, struck out four, but issued three passes and yielded four hits in three innings. He walked two men in the third and both scored when Enos Slaughter and Don Padgett hit singles in the pinch.

Hank Gornicki, Elwin (Preacher) Roe and Sam Nahem were the Cardinal pitchers.

Reds Nose Out Giants

Tampa, Fla., March 20 (AP).—The World Champion Cincinnati Reds started that one-run victory stuff again today by beating the New York Giants, 1 to 0.

Both teams ran up seven hits, but the Reds put Jimmy Gleeson's double and Frank McCormick's single together in the first inning for the day's scoring.

Jim Turner and Elmer Riddle kept the Giants in hand, with only one runner getting as far as third base.

Cubs Trounce Pirates

Los Angeles, March 20 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs slashed out 18 hits today in beating Pittsburgh's Pirates 9 to 2, with Lou Novikoff, sensational rookie outfielder getting a homer and Billy Herman and Lou Stringer making four safeties each.

Claude Passeau, former Pirate hurler, held his former mates to two blows in five innings. Jack Mooty, his successor, fanned five in the three frames he worked, but permitted four hits and the two runs.

A's Win Easily

Jack Knott, a former Sox pitcher, hurled the first four innings for the A's and gave up only two hits and no runs. Pete Suder figured in all the Athletic scoring, getting two triples, a double and a single.

Phils Trounce Red Birds

Hollywood, Fla., March 20 (AP).—The Phillies shook off their batting lethargy today and garnered 17 wallops to subdue the American Association Columbus Red Birds, 20 to 9.

The heretofore impotent National Leaguers massaged the offerings of four Red Bird flingers right from the start—chalking up six counters in a wierd first inning. Bobby Bragan led the onslaught with three singles, a double and a walk in six appearances.

The Birds plastered Frank Melton, their erstwhile teammate, for six runs in the seventh.

Bears Bow to Yanks

Sebring, Fla., March 20 (AP).—The New York Yankees continued their practice of ruling their minor league relatives with a firm hand today by beating the Newark Bears, of the International League, 9 to 6, in an exhibition.

The Bears collected a dozen hits off Rookies Charley Stanceau and George Washburn, but allowed the Yanks to get three runs on two hits in the third frame and four runs on one hit in the seventh.

Writers Play, Tra-la

Tampa, Fla., March 20 (AP).—The Tampa Nuggets, composed of baseball writers covering the Cincinnati Reds, retained their claim to the mythical writers' championship today by defeating the Miami Brannigans, managed by Eddie Brannick, secretary of the New York Giants, 10-8.

The game attracted a gallery of 700 fans. It was announced by Al Schacht, noted baseball comedian.

Fenske's induction has been set tentatively for March 26. He is employed as a National Youth Administration recreation supervisor.

Fenske, one of the brightest track stars ever turned out by the University of Wisconsin, had a poor season on indoor tracks. He recently suffered a series of colds and is not in top condition, but expects to derive physical benefits from military service and regain his racing form.

Eagles Aim For Cup Series Victory Tonight

A golden opportunity to clinch the Mayor Walker Cup Series and the trophy that goes with it awaits the Eastern Hockey League Champion Washington Eagles tonight when they entertain the New York Rovers at Riverside Stadium at 8:30 o'clock.

The Eagles, victorious in 10 of their 12 games with the Rovers thus far this season, need only to tie the smooth skating New Yorkers in order to definitely assure themselves of the Walker Cup.

Coach Redvers Mackenzie yesterday emphasized that the Eagles will be bearing down with their most aggressive brand of hockey in their effort to clinch the Walker Cup tonight and will continue to bear down through the remainder of their schedule.

"Now that the boys are champions they want to look the part," Mackenzie insists, "and they also are determined to be at their peak in the event we participate in a play-off series.

Burns Draws Interest

"We've had two close calls against the Rovers since they shut us out at Madison Square Garden a few weeks ago, 2 to 0, and we'd like nothing better than to close our series with them by running up a score. Our boys are mostly in grand shape and are primed for some fine hockey."

Much interest tonight will be centered around the individual play of Norm Burns, brilliant Washington center, who is leading the Eastern League's scorers with 83 points and has scored the most goals, 60.

Burns, who is leading Atlantic City's Heck Pozzo by a single point, entertains high hopes of fattening both records tonight. Norm recently fired two goals, including the winning shot, against the Rover Boys and accounted for three goals and an assist against the Rovers in a single game in early season.

Hemming Starred

Gordon Hemming, the clever Washington goalie whose great work in the nets clinched the Eastern League's championship for the Eagles in Baltimore last Sunday night, probably will be back on the job tonight. Hemming recently turned back the Orioles twice within three nights and is confident that he can follow up on the Rovers tonight.

The invading New Yorkers will bring back some swift skating and high scoring stars who have gone good against the locals all season. Elmer Kreeller, Frank Dotten, Eddie Dartnell, Julian Sawchuk, Lude Check and Bob Brownridge all will be back on the job as will Gerry Cosby, who has played a good goal since essaying a comeback for the Rovers in midseason.

Oregon Team Breaks Record In Swim Meet

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., March 0.—The Multnomah Athletic Club, Portland, Oreg., successfully defended its 400-yard free style relay title tonight with a record-shattering performance in the National A. A. U. women's swimming and diving meet.

The Multnomah mermaids, Suzanne Zimmerman, Nancy Merki, Joyce Macrae and Brenda Helser, covered the distance in 4:12.4, clipping a full second from the previous American mark set in Chicago, April 2, 1936, by the Washington Athletic Club, of Seattle, Wash.

The Women's Swimming Association, New York City, was second, and the Worcester Women's Swimming Association, Worcester, Mass., third.

Champion Abdicates

Helene Rains, New York City, became 300-yard individual medley champion, churning the distance in 4:04.9.

Betty Bemis, Indianapolis, was second and Ruth Howarth, Whitinsville, Mass., third.

Earlier, a new 300-yard individual medley champion was assured when Lorraine Fischer, defending titleholder, withdrew after narrowly qualifying for the semifinals.

Miss Fischer's national record of 4:10.2 established in Miami last year was broken twice as four aquatic stars, Helene Rains, New York; Ruth Howarth, Whitinsville, Mass.; Dorothy Leonard, Worcester, Mass., and Betty Bemis, Indianapolis, won their way to the finals.

Feat Is Duplicated

Miss Leonard was the first to shatter the mark when she was timed in the fourth elimination heat in 4:09.2, while Miss Bemis duplicated the feat in the first semifinal heat in 4:09.8.

Neither, however, approached the American record for the distance of 4:08, set by Katharine Rawls in Indianapolis May 1, 1938.

Twelve-year-old Joan Fogle thrilled the spectators in the first heat by outswimming both Miss Fischer and Patricia McWhorter, of Newark, N. J., who last night won the 100-yard free style crown. However, Joan was eliminated in a semifinal race, won by Miss Rains.

Although Miss Fischer qualified for a semifinal berth, she decided to withdraw to preserve her strength for the relay team race.

Cardinals at St. Petersburg last week, he entered the game as a relief pitcher with the bases full and two strikes on the batter and then clowned around for a bit before pitching.

After coming out of a Class D league in 1939, Dean won 12 games with Charlotte in the Piedmont League last season, which was an acceptable improvement. He is in the thick of the fight for the fourth starting job on the Washington club, although at present the long-shot in the battle among himself, Walter Masterson and Arnold Anderson.

Released to Charlotte

The Nats did not see a lot of Dean last year despite the fact he was in spring training camp . . . He pitched only ten innings before being released to Charlotte . . . While the Nats' regulars are meeting the Tigers tomorrow, the second team will go to Daytona Beach, 60 miles away, to take on the Chattanooga Lookouts . . . Alex Carrasquel arrived in camp by bus from Miami and took his first workout today after being in custody of the immigration officials because he was broke and lacked the $10 "head tax" . . . Clark Griffith says Carrasquel's $100 fine for reporting two weeks late will stick . . . The Venezuelan claims that he was the victim of the rate of exchange of American money in Venezuela . . . declaring the $200 transportation funds that were sent him was worth only $128 in Venezuelan bolivars . . . Unlike former years, Carrasquel has not been pitching winter ball, and is woefully out of condition . . . Walter Masterson was the pitching star of today's workout . . . He was cracking his new side-arm fast ball across the plate and raising hob with the hitters . . . Arnold Anderson was unable to get out of the way of a line-drive off Jimmy Bloodworth's bat and took a nasty blow against the thigh that may set him back at least a week . . . Bloodworth was the power boy of the morning workout with his long clouts . . . Manager Bucky Harris is in something of a dither at a report from Gastonia, N. C., that Buddy Lewis has been ordered to take a selective service physical examination after filling out his questionnaire . . . Lewis denies that he has received any such notification . . . He assumed he was placed in Class A-3 on account of his dependents . . . If the Army does grab Lewis, then Harris' next move will be obvious . . . He will shift Cecil Travis back to third base and restore Jimmy Pofahl to shortstop . . . He likes the way Pofahl is now throwing the ball.

Helen Dettweiler Wins In Augusta Golf Play

Defending Champion Helen Sigel Bows In Quarter-Finals at Forest Hills Club

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., March 20.—Defending Champion Helen Sigel of Philadelphia, fell by the wayside today as Medalist Elizabeth Hicks of Long Beach, Calif., led the field into the penultimate round of the Forest Hills Invitation Golf Tournament.

Three down at the turn, Miss Sigel carried Miss Hicks to the home green before succumbing, 1 up. Joining Miss Hicks in tomorrow's semifinals of the upper bracket was Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, 1939 Forest Hills titlist, who had an easy time routing Mrs. Charles Harbrough, of Cleveland, 6 and 5.

Miss Bauer Wins

Other survivors were Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., and Professional Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C. Miss Bauer was forced to go one extra hole before eliminating Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., 1 up. Miss Dettweiler edged out Dorothy Gardner, the Ohio State champion from Steubenville, 2 and 1.

In turning back Miss Sigel, Miss Hicks was forced to hold on, on the back nine as her putting all but collapsed. She three-putted the sixteenth from three feet away.

Trails All the Way

Mrs. Harbough never had a look in with Miss Kirby, who made the turn six up.

Miss Bauer held a two-hole advantage over Miss Cothran going to the tenth and came back to win at the nineteenth after South Carolina performer had squared the match.

Jurges Leaves Clinic, Joins Club

Rochester, Minn., March 20 (AP).—Bill Jurges was released from Mayo Clinic today and left Rochester by rail this afternoon to rejoin his New York Giants mates in training camp. Jurges said he received a "favorable report" from clinic physicians.

Jurges, who has been receiving medical treatment here for two weeks, said he "believed he was going to be all right from now on." He had suffered a recurrence of dizzy spells suffered as a result of being hit by a pitched ball last summer.

Snead could have won then with a par-4, but he wasn't taking any chances. He whaled into a No. 4 iron and the ball stopped bare inches from the cup. As he broke through the ring of galleryites to tap the ball in he got a hand such as few golfers ever receive.

turned it. Doug Bentley's attempt at the goal was deflected, but Max Bentley drove it in for the winning goal.

The Hawks continued pressing and scored late in the period when a well-executed 20-foot low pass by Cully Dahlstrom glanced off the stick of his teammate George Allen and into the net.

Red Wings Trip Rangers, 2 to 1

Detroit, March 20 (INS).—A "sudden death" overtime goal by Left Winger Syd Howe gave the Detroit Red Wings a 2-to-1 victory over the New York Rangers, in the ing Stanley Cup champions, in the first game of the playoffs in the B series.

The winning goal came at 12:01 of the overtime when Howe took a pass from Gus Geisebrecht and backhanded the tally from 30 feet out near the boards. Veteran Ebbie Goodfellow slipped the puck to Geisebrecht to set up the play.

After more than a period and a half of fast, bruising play in which the Wings held a slight edge, Detroit opened the scoring at 14:39 of the second frame when Left Winger Carl Liscombe took an assist from Alex Motter and fired the puck knee high into the net from 50 feet out.

The Rangers came back to knot the count at 4:33 of the third period.

Green Hornet Disqualified In Wrestling Match at Arena

Eighteen hundred vituperative fans mobbed the ringside at Turner's Arena last night to heap abuse upon the surly head of the Green Hornet after he had been disqualified for tossing Joe Cox and Referee Casey Berger out of the inclosure.

The gentlemen had been hard at it for 16½ minutes when the faux pas occurred. Up until the time of the aforementioned tossing Cox, who was slated to be the hero of the show, was more than holding his own. He was aided and abetted by Referee Berger who repeatedly warned the Hornet for conduct unbecoming a gentleman. Finally, the masked meanie worked himself into a peeve, grabbed two fistfuls of Cox anatomy and propelled him over the ropes.

Not content, the Hornet followed through by disposing of Berger in the same manner. The dispossessed duo sided each other to their feet and back into the ring. Cox groaning horribly the meanwhile, and Berger raised Big Joe's paw as a sign of victory.

But Mr. Hornet had learned his role well and he had no intention of yielding the stage so readily. He promptly tossed Cox into the gallery again. This time Joe's carcass described a graceful arc over the press table and landed on the floor with a dull thud. This bit of business was too much for the devotees of dupe who then mobbed the ringside before the Hornet was led back to his cubicle.

In the semifinal, Milo Steinborn and Warren Bockwinkle, wrestled 30 minutes to a draw that was well received by the crowd. This match showed more finesse than any offering of the night.

Comedy on Card

Comedy was supplied by the two-man team which brought together Len Macaluso and Fred Grobmier against Tiger Tasker and Ed Newman. Macaluso and Grobmier, who bears a striking resemblance to Slim Summerville, won their bout when they disposed of Tasker in 12 minutes and Newman in 15.

In the opener, Ed Franer, of the Naval Air Station, won over red-headed Otto Brill, a newcomer from Des Moines, in 17 minutes.

Cup Tourney Play-Offs Abandoned

Tournaments Split Between Six Clubs; Winter Rules, 9 Holes Eliminate Others

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Manor Country Club was awarded the District women's championship and the Class A division of The Washington Post Cup play in the tournament schedule of the District Women's Golf Association, released yesterday in a meeting at Kenwood Country Club.

The important match and medal play events were divided between six clubs in a drastic change over the previous method of awarding the tournaments. Mrs. Walter L. Weible, president of the association, announced that tournaments would not be played over nine-hole courses or courses where winter rules are in effect during the season.

Thus 7 of the 13 member clubs were not considered in the division of events, Argyle, Belle Haven, Indian Spring and Woodmont all 9-hole courses and Bannockburn, Beaver Dam and Army and Navy, 18-hole layouts that use winter rules most of the season.

Play-offs Abandoned

Playoffs were also abandoned and ties in the one-day medal tournaments will now be decided immediately after the round. In case of a tie in gross competition, the contestants will start a quick death, hole-by-hole battle while if the ties result in low net scoring, the parties concerned will match cards with the handicap allowance figured in. If still tied, the lowest handicapped golfer will receive the trophy and if the handicaps are the same, they, too, will go back on the course for a quick-death playoff.

The schedule will open as usual, with the Washington Golf and Country Club's invitation event, the Phyllis Keeler Miller memorial event on Monday, April 21. The two-day Keefer Cup Tournament will follow at Chevy Chase April 28-29, restricted to Class A players only.

The Post trophy play will find the low handicapped players at Manor July 22 and the Class B players at Congressional the same day. The Herald Cup will also be a one-day, two-course event, while both sections of the Star Cup will be played at Washington Golf Club.

The radio company sponsored events will remain as last year, the C. B. S. for Class B players and the N. B. C. for Class A.

Run Through Season

The tournament schedule will run through the entire season instead of a first half ending in June and a second half resuming in September. Four events will be played in July and August, making a more even distribution of tournaments.

Manor will play host to the week-long District Women's Championship June 2-6, inclusive. The Corby and President's Plate events are also included in the schedule and if the treasury warrants at the end of the season, a bonus tournament will be played for the budget book holders.

The intercity team matches with Philadelphia were canceled and a home and home series with Baltimore will be the only action for the all-star team. A contemplated series with Richmond was abandoned when the Virginians would play the matches only on a handicap basis.

Dates and sites of important non-association tournaments were included in the schedule, including the Maryland State at Chevy Chase June 24-28; Middle Atlantic at Five Farms October 6-10; the Payne Trophy play September 24-26 at Rolling Road, and the Maryland State Field Day at Kenwood September 22.

Unattached players will be allowed to compete in all events but the fee has been raised to $10. They will not be eligible to receive trophies.

The defending champions are Ted Kara, 120-pounder, and Laune Erikson, 165-pounder, of Idaho; Nick Lee, Wisconsin heavyweight, and Johnny Joca, Florida 135-pounder. Zivic Beats Felix Garcia In Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 20.—Welterweight Champion Fritzie Zivic, of Pittsburgh, knocked out Felix Garcia, Puerto Rican slugger, in the second round of a scheduled ten-round nontitle bout at the Coliseum tonight.

The bout was an overweight encounter, with Zivic scaling 150 pounds against Garcia's 149 at the weighing-in ceremonies.

Zivic, recognized as world welterweight champion everywhere but in Maryland, knocked Garcia down with a right to the head in the first round and then tagged him with a convincing shot to the jaw after 2 minutes of milling in the second.

Champ Shows Speed

The champion was fast on his feet and with his fists. He was authoritative throughout the fight, throwing his right from various angles at the bewildered Garcia.

The Puerto Rican made a few feeble attempts to carry the battle to Zivic, but was ineffective from the start.

Zivic jumped in determined to prove to the crowd that he was every inch a champion, for he was still smarting under jibes of hometown fans for his showing against Saverio Turiello earlier in the week.

RECREATION

G. A. O.

The G. A. O. League at Convention Hall was led by the R. & C. boys and team with Ted Lannon getting top game with 169 and Detwiler winning the set honors after a 391 pinfall. Okla. A.-M. Matmen Choice To Retain Title

By the Associated Press

Bethlehem, Pa., March 20.—Despite the largest and strongest field of entries in history, Oklahoma A. and M. ruled a heavy favorite tonight to win its fifth straight national collegiate wrestling championship in the fourteenth annual tournament opening here tomorrow afternoon.

The Aggies, undefeated since the start of the 1938 season and boasting one defending individual champion, take top ranking over a field of more than 150 entrants representing approximately 45 institutions. Pretournament records indicate the Cowboys' stiffest opposition for team honors will come from Minnesota, Michigan State, Navy, Yale, Princeton, Franklin and Marshall and Washington and Lee.

Wide-Open Fight

The presence of wrestlers with impressive dual meet records and a sprinkling of sectional champions in every weight division indicates a wide-open fight for individual titles.

Only two of the 1940 winners—Bob Antonacci, Indiana 121-pounder, and Al Whitehurst, Oklahoma A. and M. 136-pounder—will return to defend their crowns, but a 1939 champion, Heavyweight Johnny Harrell, of Navy, will seek to regain the title he won while a student at Oklahoma A. and M.

In addition to Whitehurst, the Aggies have leading individual contenders in Capt. Calvin Melhorn, runner-up for last year's 121-pound title; Buddy Arndt, 145-pound sophomore, and Earl Van Bebber, 165-pounder. All are undefeated this year.

Schedule Listed

Preliminary matches will begin at 1 p. m. (E. S. T.) and quarter-finals at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Semi-final and preliminary third-place bouts are scheduled Saturday afternoon (1 p. m.) and the championship and third place final bouts Saturday night.

Four places will be awarded this year for the first time with the loser of the title bout automatically taking second place and the loser of the third place final bout receiving fourth place.

Alexander Found In Bronx Hospital After Job Appeal

By the Associated Press

New York, March 20.—Grover Cleveland Alexander, one of the immortals of baseball, wanted to get a job somewhere in his favorite sport.

At 54 he was in poor health and found that lecturing at a flea circus just off Broadway was a precarious living. He wanted to feel the warmth of the southern sun and the flush of training camp fever once more.

He advertised last month in a national baseball paper for a connection, "as manager, coach or in any other capacity in which my experience and knowledge of the game will prove valuable."

But baseball was deaf. Today he was discovered at a war veterans' hospital in the Bronx, where for three weeks he has been a patient.

He served in France with Battery F, 342d Field Artillery, Eighty-Ninth Division, in the World War.

Former Baltimore Pitcher Passes Away

Rochester, N. Y., March 20 (AP).—Frank J. Paprocki, 51, deputy city assessor and one-time member of the pitching staff of the Baltimore Orioles, died yesterday.

He served with the Student Army Training Corps at Syracuse during the World War and played with the old Rochester Premiers before joining the Baltimore team.

Jenkins Sought For Fight Here In Late May

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez yesterday threw an added incentive to his four participants in Monday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena with the announcement that he had dispatched a $2,000 offer to Lew Jenkins, the lightweight king, to meet the "standout fighter on the card."

With 10 per cent of the gross proceeds of the show going to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund sponsored by The Washington Post and Statoin WJSV, Menendez stated he was planning a Jenkins match here late in May to open the outdoor season at Griffith Stadium.

Hurst to Meet Cross

The four who will be gunning for the shot at Jenkins are Harry Hurst, outstanding Canadian fighter, winner of 19 straight matches; Tommy Spiegel, his stablemate, the "Miracle Kid" of boxing and present Pennsylvania champion; Slugger White, sensational Fall River, Mass., colored scrapper, and Tommy Cross, Philadelphia colored ace.

Hurst will meet Cross, and Spiegel will engage White in the double windup 10-rounders on the benefit show.

Menendez said he directed his wire to Willie Ketcham, old-time star, who is handling Jenkins for Hymie Caplin. While in New York recently Menendez said Jenkins was "most receptive" when asked if he would like to fight in Washington.

Will Drill Today

Hurst, who has scored 13 kayos, and Spiegel, who is the most unique fighter in the game due to his game leg, which has proven no handicap, will arrive this morning, and work out in public this afternoon at 1 o'clock at Huron gym, 511 Eleventh Street Northwest. Both boys are handled by George Sheppard, and Hurst will be seeking revenge for a victory Cross, his opponent, scored over Spiegel last year.

Menendez said that the kayo king, White, and Cross will work out at Huron tomorrow, thus bringing all four windup fighters on the scene several days in advance of the matches.

Flashy Penn Hockey Team Meets Hoyas

One of the leading collegiate ice hockey teams in the East invades Riverside Stadium tomorrow night when the University of Pennsylvania sextet, Eastern Pennsylvania Ice Hockey Conference champion for the second consecutive season, meets Georgetown University icemen at 8 o'clock.

It will be the final 1941 test of the Hoyas and the game itself will be followed by two hours of public skating, both of which will be offered for an admission price of 54 cents.

Victor Edelman, hailed as one of the finest college goalies in the country, will be featured by the visitors who will be out to snap the undefeated string of the Hoyas, who have routed Franklin and Marshall and Temple, nosed out Lehigh and played Penn State to an overtime tie.

Rustic Cabin Wins

Rustic Cabin courtmen defeated Maryland Park Boys' Club, 53-38, last night in the Maryland Park High School gym. Tex Givens led the scorers with 19 points.

Board Places Lopez in Class 3

Tampa, Fla., March 20 (AP).—Al Lopez, catcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates, was placed in class 3 by the draft board here today because of dependents.

Lopez, who went to major league baseball from Tampa, sent his questionnaire from the Pirates' training camp at Pasadena, Calif. He was married several months ago.

Only his classification was revealed by the draft board here.

Tulsa Court Coach Gets Wichita Job

Tulsa, Okla., March 19 (AP).—Jack Sterrett, basketball coach at the University of Tulsa, has been employed at Wichita (Kans.) University as track coach and assistant in other sports, it was learned tonight.

Sterrett's contract was not renewed at the close of the basketball season, his first at Tulsa University.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Sarasota, Fla., March 20.—The Boston Red Sox are only a secondary attraction at Sarasota this year—even though Jimmy Foxx, Ted Williams, Dom DiMaggio and Bobby Doerr are as flashy as ever, and even though Mickey Harris and Earl Johnson may be the dark horse pitchers of the American League this year.

CONSIDINE

The reason the boys are playing second fiddle with the tourist trade is the arrival at the nearby circus winter quarters of Toto, Mrs. Gargantua as she is now called. Toto is the lady gorilla who has been chosen as the ever-loving spouse of that rough and ornery citizen, Gargantua.

She weights a little over 400 pounds, has huge black hands strong enough to pull your arm out by the roots, and the mannerisms of a Victorian debutante. For all her strength, she is too shy to eat when anyone is watching her, uses a dainty handkerchief a lot more neatly than a certain young man who lives at our house, and when you tap on the thick plate glass of her big, white, air-conditioned cage, she coyly puts her mammoth paws over her eyes and giggles.

In face of all this incorrigible femininity, and the arch glances of the two-legged beings he so enthusiastically hates, Gargantua's disposition has grown steadily worse. This is plainly a shotgun romance to old sourpuss and he'll have none of it, or her. The incurable romanticists of the circus backed the two cages together, not long after Toto arrived from her Havana plantation, and boy met girl through chilled steel bars.

About four feet of open air separated them that day, but it was too close for Gargy. He beat himself on that enormous bass-drum chest of his, picked up some celery and lettuce off his floor and hurled it at her. Then he turned on his heel and strode away, muttering like a picture bridegroom who won an artist's model by mail and then found that she modeled for Thurber.

All Toto did that day was give off an embarassed bark, like a fox terrier, but Toto's owner, a rich childless widow who talks some mumbo-jumbo to Toto, as well as feeds her and plays with her, comforted Toto with the thought that the big ape isn't good enough for her anyway. Since that day Toto has plainly indicated that she is marrying beneath her, and Gargy's baleful eyes have shown that he is plotting anew how to escape and how to kill his trainer, Dick Kroener. Gargy has been plotting to kill Dick for years.

So that's the status of the first attempt to mate gorillas in captivity, and believe me it is worrying the Sarasota winter colony a lot more than is the question of whether Grove can pitch more than once a week. In the meantime, Toto severely snubs Gargy, across 20 feet of glass and bars and air, while she plays on her swing, rolls her ball, or does her lessons, which consist of repeating a few grunty words and counting on her thick fingers. Gargy just sits there glaring indignantly.

What immortal hand or eye formed his fearful symmetry (see Blake's collected verse) certainly turned in a dire job. The acid burns Gargy suffered as a kid did the rest of an increasingly awesome job. He has gained 50 or 60 pounds during the off-season and has grown a little more, though he still isn't full grown. You can't realize just how wrong Lieut. Comdr. James Joseph Tunney was when he wrote that Tony Galento could beat this bum, until you press your nose against his cage and see him spring at you. He looks strong enough to break an elephant's back.

Gargy's handlers have worked out a plan to rescue Toto (or vice versa) if Gargy fetches her one across the chops when the bars are finally lowered. They wouldn't tell us what it is. They did say, however, that it might be another full year before the dear young people test the old axiom that two gorillas can live as cheaply as one. They're afraid that if they put them together right now, even though Toto has been officially christened Mrs. Gargantua, it would result in a slam-bang brawl that would drive the memory of the Dempsey-Firpo fight out of the public mind.

The lot of Gargy and his unkissed bride isn't thoroughly unhappy, however. They dine on better steaks than Yawkey's ball players do, and, considering the obvious inequalities of the standard baseball contract, have more personal liberty than the nearby ball players. At least they can't be released on 10 days' notice. Anyway, let's hope they aren't.

Odenton, Md., March 20 (AP).—Babe Phelps, big catcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, is recovering at his home here of a sinus attack. Phelps, who has not reported for spring training with the Dodgers in Florida, started southward when the Dodgers were in Havana, became ill in Miami and returned to his home for treatment.

Bit O' Green Scores Easily in Key Largo Purse at Tropical

Connolly Up On Winner; Pays $14.40

Daughter of Morsel Scores by 4 Lengths In Excellent Time; Favorites Fail

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 20.—Bit O' Green, which scored a hard-earned triumph here five days ago, came back in a seemingly tougher spot today and repeated with ease in the 6-furlong Key Largo purse for 3-year-old fillies. Under the guidance of Apprentice Eddie Connolly, the Nat Palumbo color-bearer reported four lengths on top to return $14.40 for $2. Her time was 1:10 3-5 and, according to the electric teletimer, the daughter of Morsel blazed the first half mile in :44 4-5.

Proud One, coupled with Sari Omar as the Calumet Farm entry, was almost as easily second over the Tower Stable's react. Sari Omar just missed the show.

Favorite Fades

Light As Air, favorite in the field of 12, began in rapid fashion, only to drop out of contention after 2 furlongs.

Rain, which began threatening several days before, still held off this afternoon so that the racing strip remained at its fastest.

Bit O' Green, after shaking off the speedy Light As Air, sprinted into a commanding lead, leaving no doubt as to her marked superiority over the opposition. Proud One began her challenge before reaching the stretch turn. It was a hopeless chase. React was beaten three lengths for the runner-up prize.

Light As Air was the fifth straight losing choice of the day.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN ANTIOCH, $7.20, $3.40, $2.70; BEST QUALITY, $3.20, $3.00; STEAM ROLLER, $4.60.

INDIAN PENNY, away fast, crossed the field sharply in the opening furlong, bore over again midway around the turn and drew clear, but was under extreme pressure to just last. He, however, was disqualified for foul. SUN ANTIOCH, going forwardly throughout, finished gamely and was wearing the winner down. BEST QUALITY, shuffled back at the start, gradually improved his position to finish strong. STEAM ROLLER swung wide into the stretch to close with a belated rush.

Daily Double—BELLCODA and SUN ANTIOCH paid $43.50.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:11½. Winner, Mrs. J. B. HAZEL F., pinched back in the run down the backstretch, was taken to the outside in the final 3 furlongs, gained with determination and wore GAYSET down in the final drive. GAYSET tiptoed from the start, took a clear lead at the furlong and then hung in the stretch run. FOXLEIGH, crowded back at the start, went around the field after leaving the backstretch and closed stoutly under punishment.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:38. Off at 3:39. Winner, Mrs. V. Leonard's b. g. HAPPY LARK forced a fast pace from the start, shook off MERRY GESTURE in the opening half mile, responded to a vigorous hand ride through the stretch and outlasted HIGHOMAR. The latter broke well, but lacked speed and was outrun. He came through on the inside in the final furlong and was wearing the winner down. LITTLE DAVEY, well up throughout, outgamed MERRY GESTURE when the real test came.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from Puett gate for all but Airpost. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:09. Winner, N. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIT O'GREEN, $14.40, $7.40, $4.80; PROUD ONE (entry), $4.20, $3.30; REACT, $3.60.

BIT O'GREEN, on the outside and going forwardly in the early stages, drew out rounding the turn and held PROUD ONE safe at the end. PROUD ONE, in the thick of contention throughout, was easily best of the others. REACT, hard ridden from the start, was best of the others.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:37. Winner, B. F. Lister's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVER TOWER, $19.90, $9.60, $6.50; YAWL, $7.10, $4.60; MERITORIOUS, $14.30.

SILVER TOWER, quickest to get going, drew out rounding the first turn, then, rated in front, opened up a gain under urging through the stretch. YAWL began to improve his position leaving the backstretch and disposed of MERITORIOUS in the final furlong. MERITORIOUS, a forward contender the entire trip, faltered slightly in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:07. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOPE DIAMOND, $11.70, $6.70, $4.50; FLAG POST, $12.40, $7.50; BLACANT, $6.60.

HOPE DIAMOND, hard driven and well up all the way, came slightly wide turning into the stretch, but responded to pressure and outstayed FLAG POST. The latter saved much ground rounding the lower turn, assumed a short lead, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. BLACANT moved up strongly on the outside leaving the backstretch, but then faltered under punishment.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:35. Off at 5:35½. BIG BRANDS SON, rated in front to the stretch turn, opened up a good lead, but then faltered and just lasted long enough to stave off SAY JUDGE'S bid. The latter gradually bettered his position, closed gamely to punishment and would have won in a few strides. CONRAD MANN, outrun early, finished fast in the final furlong to dispose of HUNTING HOME.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al.

It you don't believe Bowie is sneaking up on us, here's the nominations for the Rowe Memorial, the opening day stake: Mrs. A. J. Abel's Skin Deep and Honey Cloud; E. K. Bryson's Clyde Tolson; Mrs. Emil Denemark's Prairie Dog, War Minstrel, Court Dance and Equistar; Victor Emanuel's Omission; G. Felkner's Maechance; William F. Hitt's Watercracker; Mrs. A. Peletri's Catapult, and A. G. Vanderbilt's Good Turn. Just 11 days until they're off at 2 p. m. That 2-year-old, first-time starter at Tropical Park today is Ask Me by the sire Questionnaire. Speaking of aptly-named juveniles, Robert Walden has a colt nominated for the Bowie Kindergarten. He is by War Hero out of Truthfulness and has the appropriate name of Fair Fighter. Mrs. R. H. Heigh has one named Pony Ballett, by Theatrical out of Park. Here's an interesting note on the Kentucky Derby: Horses whose names begin with the letter "B" have won twice as many Derbies as those with any other first letter. The "A," "L" and "M" have provided five. So if Col. E. R. Bradley had not won four Derbies, the "B" would still set the pace. Twelve women have named horses for the 1941 Derby. Mrs. Payne (Greentree Stable) Whitney and Mrs. Ethel V. (Milky Way Farm) Mars have three entries each. Both have owned winners of other Derbies. The only other stables which have taken one and have entries this year are Belair Stud and Woolford Farm. Remember Don Orlan, the long-priced winner last sprin? He has been named for the Kentucky Classic by Mrs. J. L. Furr. Won't be long until I'll see you on the rail. BILL.

First race—WALLINGFORD has had enough education and can be relied on to do a lot of running in this field. Has a good post position and the veteran Arcaro to do the riding. AT LIBERTY has worked well and should be in the thick of contention. PATRIOT may finish ahead of the others.

Second race—WHA HAE has been juggled around and finally lands in what appears to be the right spot. Gets only 111 pounds, thanks to the apprentice allowance, and I'm going to string along. GOLD MESH is far down the list, but will have to be dealt with if in action. IRON WILL for the show end.

Third race—MEXICANA may be the right one in this sprint field. Has raced well and seems capable of turning back this kind. CHANCE RUN and STARKEE have good figures and may fill out the money bracket.

Fourth race—SHERRON ANN has plenty of speed, gets in light and breaks off the rail. She gets my call in a rather open race. SPEED TO SPARE has the foot, but also stops. REMARKABLE for the show money.

Fifth race—DETROIT BULL likes this route and the other conditions appear right. Don Meade is slated to ride, and I see no reason for mistakes. DEVIL'S CRAIG has been going good and is dangerous. BRIGHT TRACE is a possibility due to feather weight.

Sixth race—SOCRATIC seems nicely placed in this field. Fancies the distance and is reported ready. MINT LIBERTY may be better than generally rated. MYSTERY LAD

Curtiss-Wright Reports Net of $1.83 a Share

By the Associated Press

New York, March 20.—Curtiss-Wright Corporation, one of the world's leading aviation manufacturers, reported today consolidated net profit for 1940 of $15,932,251, a gain of nearly 200 per cent over the net of $5,323,455 in 1939.

After provision for dividends of $2 a share on Class A capital stock, the profit was equal to $1.83 a common share compared with 39 cents a share in the previous year.

Guy W. Vaughan, president, told stockholders: "The period has been the most spectacular in the history of Curtiss-Wright and we believe the expansion accomplished has been greater than that of any other company in the industry.

"All plans for expansion have been made with the idea in mind that plants wholly owned by Curtiss-Wright, after the cessation of hostilities and the completion of our national defense program, can be operated on an economically sound basis through the maintenance of our program plus the accumulated requirements of domestic air line operators."

In the past year, the company shipped $138,720,000 of products, a gain of 185 per cent over the previous year. The backlog of unfilled orders on December 31 stood at $716,971,000, up 400 per cent in 12 months.

At the first of this year, the company employed 29,332 workers, compared with 12,560 at the start of 1940.

"Curtiss-Wright," said Vaughan, "is playing a major part in the national defense program and has cooperated in every way possible with the various branches of the Government in order to accomplish this.

"During October and November, 1940, ground was broken for four new Curtiss-Wright plants at Buffalo, Cincinnati, Columbus, Ohio, and St. Louis, totaling 5,635,000 square feet of floor area.

"All of these plants are being financed by and will remain the property of the United States Government, although operated and controlled by Curtiss-Wright personnel."

Building Awards Continue Heavy

New York, March 20 (AP).—Engineering construction awards slowed their breakneck pace this week but exceeded the corresponding period a year ago for the twenty-ninth consecutive week, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Awards totaled $89,558,000, a drop of 32 per cent from the previous week, but 71 per cent greater than the corresponding week last year.

Contracts for private construction were 20 per cent less than the week before and public awards were down 35 per cent. Compared with a year ago, however, private contracts gained 5 per cent and public work was 101 per cent greater.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 20 (AP).—Profit taking caused a setback in grain prices today after a session of nervous and, at times, rapid fluctuations. All but one style of wheat and corn registered small net gains, equaling or bettering the 1941 highs recorded yesterday.

Selling was encouraged by the fact that at yesterday's best levels wheat showed gains for the past month of 11 to 13 cents, corn 6 cents and soybeans 20. Increased terminal market receipts of wheat and evidence of expanded redeeming of grain that has been under loan since last summer were bearish factors.

Wheat dipped as much as a cent in early dealings, rallied more than a cent to show net gains of ¼@⅞ after noon, then fell back again to the lows of the session. The close was ⅝@1 lower than yesterday. May, 84⅛@86⅛; July, 85⅜@87⅛. Corn action paralleled that of wheat, with prices closing ¼@⅝ down, May, 64⅞@65; July, 65. Oats finished unchanged to ¼ off; rye, 1⅛@1⅛ down and soybeans 2¼@2⅜ lower. Lard lost 5 to 10 cents.

Utility Holding Systems Start Major Changes

New York, March 20.—Sweeping changes in major public utility holding company systems were reported in progress or under consideration today as the units moved to fall in line with integration mandates of the Public Utility Holding Company Act.

Standard Gas & Electric Co. announced that it proposed to sell all of its properties except the Philadelphia Electric Co., which it would retain as its basic integrated system.

National Power & Light Co., an affiliate of Electric Bond & Share, was reported planning sale of certain of its properties and retirement of its funded debt and a substantial portion or all of its preferred stock.

C. & S. Studies Plans

Executives of a third company, Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, were studying proposals of the Securities and Exchange Commission as to how their system might be trimmed to fit the requirements of the act.

The program of Standard Gas & Electric Co. was disclosed by Leo T. Crowley, president and chairman, in a letter to stockholders. It included immediate sale of some properties and improvement of others for future marketing.

Units for which negotiations for disposal of security holdings are under way include California Oregon Power Co., Mountain States Power Co. and Southern Colorado Power Co., Crowley said.

Plans of National Power & Light Co. were said to include the sales of certain properties and the use of the proceeds and treasury funds to retire its debentures and part of the preferred stock. The company has outstanding $17,734,000 or 5 and 6 per cent debentures and 279,716 shares of $6 preferred are in public hands.

Principal public utility assets of this holding system consist of Pennsylvania Power & Light Co., Carolina Power & Light Co., Houston Lighting & Power Co. and the Birmingham Electric Co.

Three Alternatives

Meanwhile, executives of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation were getting their first look at proposals of the SEC for simplification of the company's holdings. Top officials declined to comment pending thorough study of the recommendations which shape up around three alternate courses, depending on what unit the company desires to retain as its integrated operating system. The proposals were roughly as follows:

1. Selection of Consumers Power Co., which operates in Michigan, as the single integrate system and disposal of Southern properties and those in Illinois and Pennsylvania and Ohio.

3. Retention of Albama Power Co. as basic unit and disposal of Northern properties and those in South Carolina and Georgia.

3. Choice of Georgia Power Co. as integrated system, stripping the company of other properties.

Ford Plans Plastic Auto Body, Delves Into Substitute Metals

By David J. Wilkie

Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, March 20.—Henry Ford, who expects in the not very distant future to produce an automobile body made entirely of plastics, said today that he believes scientists in the Nation's industrial laboratories can readily solve the threat of shortages in needed defense materials.

Research into the utility and availability of substitutes for vital defense materials used on automobiles has been under way in the Ford laboratories for many months. Some changes in materials already have been made, Ford indicated, and added that changes thus far mapped out in the making of automobile parts will mean a saving of 60 per cent in nickel, 50 per cent in aluminum and 50 per cent in zinc.

Similar research work is being carried on in the laboratories of General Motors, Chrysler and other automobile companies as well as in the plants of the major supplying companies.

In making the study the industry's engineers have been analyzing virtually every one of the approximately 15,000 parts that go into the average automobile. It is a fairly safe guess that whatever advantageous processes the engineers of one major automobile company may develop will be made available to all others.

One of the big savings in aluminum will come from the replacement of engine pistons with substitutes made of cast iron or other materials. The Ford company has been producing steel pistons since 1935 and estimates it has cast 31,000,000 of them to date.

An indication of the savings and replacements the industry generally expects to accomplish is given by some of the replacements already worked out in the Ford laboratories.

Included in the list are:

In place of nickel—Straight chromium steel instead of nickel chromium steel on all bright metal trim; use of chromium-molybdenum steel instead of nickel-bearing steel for transmission and differential gears; use of heavier copper plate and higher polish on copper base for nickel plating to reduce thickness of steel necessary for protection.

For aluminum—Besides piston replacement, aluminum timing gear replaced by steel and plastic gear; aluminum cylinder heads replaced by cast-iron head; die-cast or powdered iron moldings substituted for aluminum in brake wheel pistons; aluminum valve chamber cover replaced by cast iron; aluminum distributor body replaced by cast iron.

For zinc—Metal die-cast trimmings being replaced in part for exterior use by steel stampings; instrument panel grille requiring 2¾ pounds of zinc to be replaced with plastic panel; radiator shells from brass (requiring 35 to 40 per cent zinc) changed to copper, and the resistor of sealed-beam headlamps to be changed from silver-plated brass to glass.

Edison Institute May Lose Some of Large Members

New York, March 20 (AP).—The Edison Electric Institute—commonly known as the trade association of the electric utility industry—may lose several prominent members as a result of its decision to register as a service organization under the Public Utility Holding Company Act, it was reliably reported today.

Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, one of the largest operating utility systems in the country, was said to have decided to withdraw from membership as a result of the institute's action. Officials of the company, however, would neither confirm nor deny.

Other large operating systems said to be intending to resign from the institute were the Boston Edison Co. and Niagara Hudson Power Corporation.

Utility circles said the plans came without surprise since integrated operating units did not come under the jurisdiction of the Holding Company Act. These large units maintain their own service organizations and have kept up their membership in the Edison Electric Institute mainly as a trade association.

Week's Loadings Increase 2.3%

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 758,693 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 16,771 cars, or 2.3 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 139,305, or 22.5 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 167,527, or 28.3 per cent, compared with 1939.

All classes of freight showed moderate gains, pushing total loadings up more than seasonally expected. It was the highest volume for any like week since 1930.

Bank Excess Reserves Drop $370,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday lendable excess reserves of banks dropped sharply last week, as millions of businesses and individuals withdrew money from the banks to pay income taxes.

Excess reserves decreased $370,000,000 to $6,110,000,000.

The board also disclosed that the 12 Federal Reserve Banks in the week ended March 19 increased their investments in Government bonds by $50,000,000, but reduced their investments in Treasury notes by the same amount.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended March 19 member bank reserve balances decreased $470,000,000. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of $492,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks, $15,000,000 in money in circulation, and $12,000,000 in Treasury cash, and a decrease of $2,000,000 in Treasury currency, offset in part by increases of $17,000,000 in gold stock and $15,000,000 in reserve bank credit, and a decrease of $18,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on March 19 were estimated to be approximately $6,110,000,000, a decrease of $370,000,000 for the week." Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended March 19, 1941, were reported as follows:

Utility Preferred Stocks Continue Upsurge; General List Irregular in Dull Deals

New York, March 20.—Leading stocks took a back seat in today's market and permitted senior utility issues to absorb the rallying limelight with gains of 1 to 3 points.

Steels, motors, rails, rubbers, oils, coppers and aircrafts were hesitant from the start and the majority closed with slightly irregular trends.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 41.7 of 659 individual issues traded—about one-half of all listed shares—240 were down, 226 up and 193 unchanged. A few relatively active intervals put volume at 490,140 shares compared with 540,440 yesterday.

Spurring the power company group were reports important holding companies were preparing to comply with the integration provisions of the securities act and discard operating subsidiaries. This, it was deduced, would greatly benefit the top ranking shares of these concerns. In line with the move was the announcement of the Standard Gas & Electric Co. that it intended to sell its operating properties, with the exception of Philadelphia Co., and ultimately eliminate its entire debt. Standard Gas preferreds led the upswing and, along with several others, went into new high ground for the year or longer.

It was noteworthy that utility shares of the common classification did little or nothing.

Retarding other divisions, brokers said, was further war nervousness in the wake of the most severe bombing raid on London this year and persistent apprehension over mounting taxes and labor rifts. The President's appointment of a National Defense Mediation Board was viewed as hopeful but failed as a general market stimulant.

Business news, including earnings statements and a more than seasonal increase in last week's freight loadings, served to restrict selling but apparently provided scant buying inspiration.

Prominent preference stocks on the day's climb, aside from General Gas, were those of Commonwealth & Southern, Engineers Public Service, Philadelphia Co., Public Service of New Jersey, Electric Power & Light, American & Foreign Power and American Power & Light.

Emerging with modest advances elsewhere were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Western Union, N. Y., Central, Pennsylvania, Kennecott, Montgomery Ward, Glenn Martin, Du Pont, Allied Chemical and Johns-Manville.

On the losing side were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Chrysler, United Aircraft, American Telephone, Southern Railway, Sun Oil, preferred; Anaconda and Public Service of New Jersey.

In the Curb, strength was displayed by senior issues of Electric Bond & Share, Empire Gas and Standard Power & Light. On the off side were Venezuelan Petroleum, Pantepec, Aluminum of America, and Creole Petroleum. Among industrial gainers were Phoenix Securities, Sherwin-Williams and Humble Oil. The turnover here was around 100,000 shares, versus 91,000 Wednesday.

Utility loans were forward leaders in a fairly steady bond department. Commodities lost some of their recent buoyancy. Sugar futures eased as quotas for this staple were hoisted. Wheat at Chicago was off ⅝ to 1 cent a bushel and corn down ¼ to ½. Cotton conceded 55c to $1.05 a bale.

Boys Club Drive Workers to Hear Final Report

The closing chapter of the 1941 Metropolitan Police Boys' Club campaign to raise $100,000 will be written today at 12:30 p. m. in the National Press Club auditorium. Campaign workers will gather for the final luncheon report meeting.

At the last meeting ten days ago, $81,040 was subscribed, and since then campaign workers have redoubled their efforts as a result of the decision to extend the drive.

The D. C. Fire Department will turn over a check for $950 as its contribution. Fire Chief Stephen Porter will present the check. This, he said, was a 100 per cent participation of the firefighters.

Chairman Charles B. Dulcan also announced a donation in the form of a legacy from the late Isaac Gans' estate had been bequeathed to the Police Boys' Club. Gans was one of Washington's outstanding civic workers and a great booster of the Police Boys' Club movement to reduce juvenile delinquency.

Col. Juenemann Buried

Funeral services for Col. George F. Juenemann, retired Army officer who died last December 10, in Los Angeles, were held at 1 p. m. yesterday in Arlington Cemetery. Col. Juenemann leaves his wife, Mrs. Ruby R. Juenemann, of Los Angeles.

W.B. Patterson Dies; Retired School Official

Walter Brown Patterson, 80, retired District school official and a pioneer in developing special facilities for teaching handicapped children here, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. A. Harding, in Wheaton, Md.

Funeral services will be tomorrow at 3 p. m., in St. Paul's Church, Rock Creek Parish, and burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Besides Mrs. Harding, he leaves another daughter, Mrs. Raymond M. Wells, of Alexandria, Va., a son, Lieut. Col. R. B. Patterson, stationed at Fort Hayes, Ohio, and three grandchildren.

Mr. Patterson retired in 1930 after 48 years as teacher, principal and supervising principal in the District school system. His service as a teacher lasted only a few months. He became principal of the Force School, in the 1700 block of Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, later headed the Wallach School, Seventh and D Streets Southeast, and then for 37 years held the position of supervising principal.

At various periods he headed the second, fourth and ninth school divisions. His major assignment, however, was to supervise special schools and activities, including teaching for mentally and physically handicapped children, the Health School for tubercular children, the Americanization School and the summer school programs.

A native of Manchester, N. H., Mr. Patterson was brought to the District by his parents when he was 6 months old. He was educated in private and public schools of the District, later received A. B. and M. A. degrees at Dartmouth College.

He returned to Washington, attended the law school of the old Columbian College, now George Washington University, and received LL. B. and LL. M. degrees there.

Mr. Patterson was a member of the District and Virginia bars, Psi Upsilon and Phi Delta Phi fraternities and Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honor society.

For many years he was active in District civic affairs as a member of the Petworth Citizens Association and the Oldest Inhabitants. He was a former president of the Federal School Men's Club, a member of the Columbia Historical Association, and of the Sons of the American Revolution.

He also had been active as member, vestryman and senior warden of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and had also been treasurer of Rock Creek Cemetery.

His wife was the late Mrs. Nellie Frances Cate Patterson, who died in 1936. They were married February 21, 1884.

He had lived in Wheaton for four years.

D.C. Man Urged As Successor to Justice Gordon

Agreeing unanimously that a lawyer acquainted with problems confronting local courts should succeed District Court Judge Peyton Gordon, recently retired, the Federation of Businessmen's Associations last night adopted a motion to seek such an appointment.

At its monthly meeting in the Hay-Adams House, the eight-year-old association, which is composed of delegates from 21 member bodies, also approved a proposal that the Police Department post vacated by Inspector William E. Holmes be filled and not be abolished.

William J. Mileham, organization officer who introduced the resolution, declared that "one experienced inspector is certainly more valuable than two rookies."

Inspector Holmes' retirement becomes effective April 1. The District Commissioners recently announced they were considering abolishing the post and using the salary to employ two additional police privates.

The federation had as guest speaker last night Mrs. Sally Muchmore, assistant director of the Better Business Bureau, who spoke on "Exposure of Fraudulent Schemes on Washington Business Organizations."

Among unlawful schemes against which Mrs. Muchmore warned her audience was that of a man who approaches local businessmen selling "new maps of Washington for $10." After collecting the money, Mrs. Muchmore said, the man declares he will brin the map to his clients. "The map doesn't show up," she said, "and neither does the salesman."

Greenwich, Conn., March 20.—The Rev. Dr. Samuel W. Grafflin, who resigned in 1930 as director of religious work at the West Side Y. M. C. A., a post he had held since 1917, died today after an illness of several months. He was 71 years old.

For some time following his retirement Dr. Grafflin, a Methodist minister, published a monthly pamphlet, The American Aristocrat, devoted to "a reemphasis of the principles and purposes of the founders of this country and their perpetuation for its sake."

Ordained in 1913, Dr. Griffin served for many years as an industrial missionary, becoming welfare director of the Ward Baking Co. before he joined the staff of the West Side Y. M. C. A. in 1917.

In 1906 Dr. Grafflin was president of the Ministerial Association of Washington, D. C. After moving to White Plains he became in 1932 that city's first commissioner of welfare.

Screams Bring Police on Run—It's a Nightmare

A report to police that a woman had screamed in the apartment house at 1901 Sixteenth Street Northwest, in which Mrs. Rose Simons Abramowitz, 25, was mysteriously strangled to death, last night brought officers racing to the scene.

Meeting Hugh Stephens, 17-year-old youth who had heard Mrs. Abramowitz's screams the day she was murdered, in the lobby, officers traced the cries to apartment 203. Mrs. Abramowitz was slain in apartment 202. In the apartment police roused Miss Madge S. Davis, Western Union employe, who told them she had been having a nightmare.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson, of the homicide squad, returned to Washington empty-handed yesterday after a three-day trip to New York City investigating the murder.

Spring's Warm Smile Thaws D. C.; Colder Forecast

Bright sunlight and gentle breezes marked Washington's last day of winter. It was winter until 7:21 p. m. yesterday, about an hour after sundown, and at that time, because the sun was directly over the equator, it was spring all of a sudden.

The mercury, which rose from 36 to 58 at 4 p. m., was going down when spring came, toward a predicted low of 38. Today will be cloudy and somewhat colder, the Weather Bureau said. Rain is likely Saturday afternoon and night.

8,000 Veterans Give Petain Vow To Help France

Copyright by New York Times

Vienne, France, March 20.—Standing with arms raised, 8,000 veterans of victory and defeat took a solemn oath in Marshal Petain's presence here today to work for France's recovery.

Hundreds of spectators burst into cheers as the marshal promised to serve France to the exhaustion of his strength. The contrast with the listless cheering that was prevalent on public occasions in France in the years since the World War was striking.

Owen Asks Support For Rent Controls

Cecil Owen, president of the Washington Industrial Union Council, yesterday urged support for the Randolph rent control bill, which provides for freezing of rents and establishment of a rent commission to determine whether rents should be increased or decreased here.

Owen's talk, "Washington's Housing Shortage," delivered over Station WINX, was the second in a series of 13 radio broadcasts, "Important to Women," scheduled for each Thursday at 3:35 p. m. under the auspices of the Washington Assembly of C. I. O. Auxiliaries.

Virginian, 105, Dies In Harrisonburg

Harrisonburg, Va., March 20.—William Anderson Hughes, 105, colored, believed to be the oldest resident in the Shenandoah Valley, died Wednesday at Rockingham Memorial Hospital after a brief illness. Aside from being blind, he was in good health until a short time ago.

Last summer, Hughes appeared on the witness stand in Rockingham Circuit Court and testified as to his age.

Meade Soldier, Va. Schoolboy Die in Traffic

A Virginia soldier was killed and another soldier and a truck driver were injured yesterday in a head-on collision on the Baltimore Boulevard near Muirkirk, Md. It was the Twenty-ninth Division's first fatality since its mobilization at Fort Meade last month.

A second Virginian—an 8-year-old boy—succumbed to injuries in Alexandria Hospital. He had been hit by a truck Tuesday after alighting from a school bus.

The dead are:

Sergt. Henry W. Stickles, 21, of Berryville, Va.

Herbert Green, of Haymarket, Va.

Stickles, a member of Headquarters Company, Eighty-eighth Infantry, died of a fractured skull en route to Casualty Hospital in the Branchville rescue squad ambulance. Private Linwood Ritter, 21, of Berryville, also of the brigade Headquarters Company, suffered head and leg injuries, and Lewis Arthur, 24, driver of the truck, sustained second-degree burns on the hands and arms.

Military police said Arthur told them the automobile swerved across the center line to the wrong side of the road and when he swung his truck far to the left to avoid a crash the machines came together head-on.

A board of three officers was appointed by Brig. Gen. George M. Alexander, commanding the Eighty-eighth Brigade, to investigate and report to the division judge advocate.

The Green boy had just alighted from the school bus in front of his home, 2 miles north of Haymarket on Route 55, when he was struck by a truck suffering a fractured skull. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Green; his father is a carpenter at Fort Belvoir.

3 Girls Injured

Nine-year-old Joan Healey, of 1135 Abbey Place Northeast, was seriously hurt yesterday when struck by an auto while playing in the 900 block Fifth Street Northeast. She was taken to Emergency Hospital with head injuries. Police listed the driver as Samuel H. Leavitt, 25, of 913 Fourth Street Northeast.

Barbara Ann Jones, 2, colored, of 60 K Street Northeast, also hit by an auto near her home, suffered injuries to face and head and was taken to Freedmen's Hospital. The driver, according to police, was William Lee, 28, colored, of 1315 Huntoon Court Southwest.

Similarly hurt was Geraldine Lakey, 6, of 105 G Street Northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital. Linden C. Prato, 41, of 5851 Potomac Avenue Northwest, was the driver, police said.

Italy Is Trying To Form Bloc In U. S., Dies Says

Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday the House Committee on un-American Activities had information indicating that Italy was attempting to draw its nationals in the United States together into what he termed a "superstate."

He said Italy, working through its consulates, Italian language newspapers, fraternal organizations and insurance societies, was asking its citizens to join a nation-wide organization to which they would make contributions and for which they would work.

"They want to form one big organization of loyal Italians in the United States," Dies said.

Peeping Tom Peeps Into Pistol Barrel

A prowler who peeked into an apartment at the Park Central Apartments, 1900 F Street Northwest, found himself looking into a pistol last night.

Mrs. Frances Godwin and Mrs. Fanny Bailey saw the Peeping Tom peering into their first-floor apartment. They telephoned Mrs. Ada McCord, resident manager, who obtained a revolver and fired once over the intruder's head. He ran.

Returning home from the Paul Junior High School, where she is a student, Marjorie Templeton, 14, yesterday afternoon frightened a burglar away, but not before he had taken $4 from a penny bank.

Easter Seal Sale to Raise $10,000 Opens

The first Easter seal sale for crippled children in the District of Columbia got under way yesterday with the mailing of a million one-cent seals from which it is hoped a $10,000 fund will be derived.

William H. Sardo, jr., who is directing the sale for the District of Columbia Society for Crippled Children, said further plans for promoting the sale will be made at a directors' meeting at 4:30 p. m. today in the Washington Board of Trade rooms, in the Star Building.

Easter seal sales have been conducted by the National Society for Crippled Children for the last eight years, Sardo explained, but this is the first time the local organization has joined the effort. The money raised benefits crippled children who are not victims of infantile paralysis. Ninety per cent of the funds raised in the local campaign will be spent here, according to the chairman.

In addition to the mail distribution of the seals, booths will be set up in downtown stores and banks. Seals may also be obtained at the chairman's office, 412 H Street Northeast.

M. J. Uline is president of the D. C. society, which was reorganized two months ago. Algernon P. Reeves is first vice president, and Albert W. Howard, second vice president.

"Great Moments from Great Plays," which should be pretty self-explanatory, is the title of the new series which you'll hear over WJSV and the Columbia network tonight from 9 to 9:30 o'clock.

The opening program is a special adaptation of Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound," the popular drama of a few years back which tells of the strange voyage made by a group of travelers into the unknown.

In successive weeks on the series you'll hear dramatic works of Eugene O'Neill, George Bernard Shaw, Henrik Ibsen, Robert Sherwood, S. N. Behrmann, George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart as well as many other of the stage classics which have endeared themselves to millions and have remained perennially popular.

Charles Martin, one of radio's foremost writers and directors, who's been responsible for such well-known network shows as "Five Star Final," "Criminal Court," "The March of Time" and "Johnny Presents," and who has done his share of writing and directing for Hollywood, is to produce and direct "Great Moments."

The casts will be made up of radio's most capable actors and actresses and musical backgrounds will be provided by a 21-piece orchestra, one of the largest musical units to be heard on a radio dramatic show, under the direction of Ray Block.

The Post Radio Highlights

8:30, WRC—With Clifton Fadiman due here tomorrow evening for a benefit lecture at Constitution Hall and Roland Young starring in the Capitol's film, Information Please tonight is peppered with names in the capital news.

9, WJSV—Columbia begins a new series: Great Moments from Great Plays. Opener will be Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound," with Brenda Forbes, George Coulouris and George Carnovsky in the cast.

Contract Bridge

Charles H. Goren, of Philadelphia, and Morrie Ellis, of New York, two outstanding bridge masters, and Mrs. A. M. Sobel, of New York, and Mrs. Ralph C. Young, of Philadelphia, who rank equally high among women champions, recently played a twenty-five-rubber bridge match the ostensible purpose of which was to decide whether men or women are better bridge players.

The lucky slam hand for the men, which occurred in the twenty-fourth rubber when the women were leading by 940 points, is shown in today's box; and in the play of it Goren had a chance to display his unquestioned skill in handling the dummy.

Distribution, a fickle goddess, favored the men this time, and though three honors were missing from his trump suit, Goren took a deep finesse to limit the loss to one. Thereafter, he abandoned the trumps to take ruffing tricks and developed a trump coup against Mrs. Sobel at the end. Altogether, it was a contract not to put up to children and novices to play.

Goren won the opening lead with the diamond ace in dummy, and then led the eight of trumps. Mrs. Sobel played the deuce, but declarer, realizing that he could lose only one trump trick, although the opponents had three of the five honors, let the eight ride, and Mrs. Young won with the queen, returning a low heart.

The ace and king of hearts were cashed and a small heart was ruffed in dummy. Then the king of diamonds was played, and a small diamond ruffed in dummy. Goren took his two high clubs, discarding his last diamond, and led a club, trumping with the nine in his hand. He played his last heart and ruffed with the spade seven, and when that card held the trick, his highly speculative slam was won. Mrs. Sobel had to underplay his ace, jack of spades with her king, ten on a club lead from dummy. Goren lost only the queen of trumps.

9 D.C. Lawyers To Help Revise Court Rules

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner of the United States Court of Appeals here yesterday announced appointment of nine leading Washington lawyers to a committee on revision of rules for criminal procedure in Federal courts.

The court, sitting as the judicial council for this circuit, set up the committee at the suggestion of Chief Justice Hughes. Similar groups are at work in the other ten Federal circuits, presenting their reports to a Supreme Court advisory group headed by Arthur T. Vanderbilt, Newark, former president of the American Bar Association.

Congress last year authorized the Supreme Court to prepare uniform rules of criminal procedure for the Federal courts, which now follow the practice of the States in which they sit. Similar uniform rules for civil cases were promulgated in September, 1938.

Members of the Washington committee are District Attorney Edward M. Curran, chairman; John J. Wilson, former chief of the criminal division of the prosecutor's office here; Roger Robb, former assistant district attorney; Lawrence Koenigsberger, William E. Leahy, former District Attorney Leo A. Rover, Seth Richardson, former Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan and Nugent Dodds.

Revision of the criminal rules will be discussed at the judicial conference here May 22 through 24.

Dutch East Indies Appeals to U. S. For Planes, Arms

The Dutch East Indies, fearing that the Axis of dictatorships may swoop down on its fabulous wealth, last night appealed to the United States Government for warplanes, antiaircraft equipment and munitions generally from America's arsenal of democracy.

Elco Nicholaas van Kleffens, Netherlands foreign minister, after a lengthy conference with Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, voiced confidence that America would arm the Dutch East Indies, "because we are all in the same boat now."

The Dutch East Indies are able to pay for the munitions America can spare, Van Kleffens said. But should this part of the Netherlands empire be unable to obtain immediately dollar exchange to pay cash, there appeared to be no doubt in his mind after conferring with Welles that the United States would see that whatever munitions aid is necessary will be quickly forthcoming under the Lease-Lend Act.

'Unwritten Law' Query Laid To Suspected Slayer of Peer

By the Associated Press

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, March 20. Blonde Lady Diana Broughton listened calmly in court today to a police inspector's testimony that her husband, Maj. Sir Henry John Delves Broughton, had inquired six days after the slaying of the Earl of Erroll:

"If you found your wife in bed with a man and shot him, would you be hanged for murder?"

The inspector testified in the second day of a preliminary inquiry into charges that the major jealously murdered the high-spirited, fun-loving Lord Erroll, his friend for 20 years.

The peer was found dead in his automobile January 24 near the town of Nanyuki, almost exactly on the Equator and at the foot of the towering 17,004-foot Mount Kenya.

The inspector said two bullets had been fired at him, that he apparently ducked the first and was struck in the head by the second. Four bullets were found near the scene, the inspector said, but ballistics experts have not identified them.

He related that Maj. Broughton made the hanging inquiry when he was being questioned January 30, and that a smoldering rubbish heap in the Broughton yard yielded fragments of a blood-stained golf stocking and some charred sacking.

The woman proprietor of a roadhouse in this tropical East African colony testified that Lord Erroll and Lady Broughton left her place shortly before midnight on the night before the slaying was discovered.

Lady Broughton was a bride of less than a month at that time, but the court heard a statement yesterday that Maj. Broughton had said she was in love with Lord Erroll and wanted to marry him.

Lord Erroll, lord high constable of Scotland, was a 39-year-old widower who years ago abandoned the social centers of Europe to establish an estate in Kenya.

Maj. Broughton, who is 57, was described in testimony yesterday as having reacted so philosophically to the whole affair that he complied with his wife's request to drop a farewell note from her into Erroll's grave.

Pueblo Employes Reject All Unions

Pueblo, Colo., March 20 (AP).—Colorado Fuel & Iron Corporation employes have rejected, by a margin of 368 votes, any union representation for collective bargaining, the National Labor Relations Board announced today.

In an election conducted by the board, on the petition of the C. I. O.-affiliated steel workers organizing committee, the workers cast 1,783 votes for S. W. O. C., 319 for the Western States Steel Production Union, an independent organization, and 2,670 for neither.

The election was ordered under a Labor Board ruling that the C. F. & I., Rockefeller-controlled steel manufacturing corporation, had dominated its so-called Rockefeller plan of employe representation.
